Forman films on the city's cine-buffs' platter

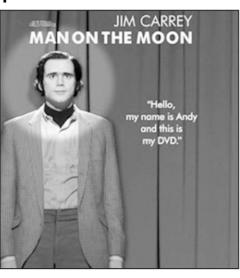

CULTURE

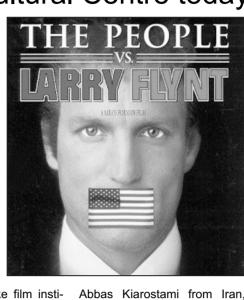

Czech new-wave film-maker Milos Forman Retrospective opens at German Cultural Centre today

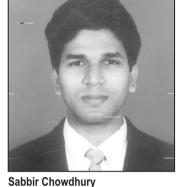

AHIR Raihan Film Society's dedication in ■ inculcating film sense and building a cine literate society is commendable. Driven by the motto to make a good movie one needs to see good film, the film society organises film sessions, retrospectives, seminars, workshops, and symposiums on film and film techniques.

Pro-active, the society's calendar of activities is focused above everything on filmconscious viewers. This week the society has come up with a retrospective on one of Hollywood's great film-makers Milos Forman.

Throughout his career, Czechoslovakian-born filmmaker Milos Forman has combined a unique sensitivity to American themes with the best of European cinematic sensibilities. His films include such successful American releases as One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest (1975), Hair (1979), Ragtime (1981), and Amadeus (1983). Forman is among only a handful of filmmakers whose body of work represents a constant artistic integrity with broad popular appeal.

Born in 1932 in Caslav, a small town outside of Prague, Forman lost both his parents in the Nazi death camps during World War II. In the early 1950s, Forman enrolled at the newly founded Film Institute at the University of Prague, where he worked with many of the major figures of the "Golden Age of Czech Cinema." It was there that he first began to form his unique visual style.

Speaking about what inspired Sabbir Chowdhury, General Secretary of the Zahir Raihan Film Society, to organise the retrospective, he said, 'I have long been interested in European cinema. So far, I have seen about 500 European films. I have been to three film festivals in Europe last year: International Festival of Film Societies at Reggio-Calabria in Manchester, and London Film Festival. This visit has given me an idea of the nature and scope of the European film industry. As is the case with film-goers in other countries, the film enthusiasts here do not have an easy access to the good and quality films which are awarded regularly in different international festivals. Zahir Raihan Film Society tries to procure and present such films to its members. Milos Forman, though he can no longer be considered a pure Czech filmmaker as he has now become a Hollywood filmmaker, is a representative of the Czech Realist Film Movement in the early sixties who later on associated himself with the Czech New Wave Film Movement. We wanted to present his films to our members. Here we have included six of his Hollywood films. We wanted to screen two of his Czech films, namely A Blonde in Love (1965) films to be screened later.' Responding about Zahir Raihan's constantly successful retrospectives of cinematic legends and focus on contemporary film-makers, Sabbir said, We believe that a successful evaluation of films and film art is and The Firemen's Ball (1968),

but we had to drop these two only possible when we watch as many films as possible by a filmmaker. This will give us an opportunity to evaluate the specific individual style of a filmmaker. As the legendary filmmakers as well as the contemporary ones have been contributing towards the development of "the Cinema" we organise 'Retrospectives' or 'Retros' focussing on a filmmak-

Reflecting on the alternative film movement and the observation by many that it has died an immature death Sabbir said in his view, "Alternative Film Movement is composed of two streams: the Film Society Movement and the Short and Alternative Film-making Movement. Zahir Raihan Film Society has been working very actively for the last fifteen years. It has so far screened more than fifteen hundred films. This year, we'll have shown more than two hundred films by the end of December. Apart from two or three other film societies, though they do not show as many films as we do, film society movement as a whole is not enjoying a high time. And same is the case with the short and alternative film movement. I wouldn't go as far as calling the movement to be dead, but it no longer has the same impact as it used to have during the Eighties or the early-Nineties.'

Film societies have an important role to play in educating cine-goers. Does film society movement succeed in educating viewers?

"Due to the shortage of funds and resources film societies cannot play the role as is expected of them. More and more government efforts are what is really needed in having a nationwide impact and proper education for the cine-goers. But, film societies like that of ours are trying their best to do so. All the alternative filmmakbigger institutes like film institutes, then it is the task of the government Our film industry is in shambles, has there any attempts from the film societies to make an inroad into the psyche of our film goers?

"It is difficult to reach all the cine-goers in Bangladesh. Because, the mainstream film industry is controlled by the business community interested in film as a means of trade - loss and profit motive is all they care about. Film societies are trying to do their best, but, as I told you earlier, our resources are limited for reaching whole Bang-ers in Bangladesh are the products of the film societies. That way, I think film societies, like Zahir Raihan Film Society, have succeeded in educating cine-goers as well as prospective filmmakers. If you think of ladesh."

Milos Forman

Talking about the future plans of the society and its aim, Sabbir said, "We'll organise a Dutch film festival very soon. As for retrospectives, we would like to Robert Altman from U.S.A., Jean-Luc Godard from France, Wim Wenders from Germany, Luis Bunuel from Spain, Kenji Mizoguchi and Yasujiro Ozu from Japan, Zhang Yimou from China, Wong Kar-Wai from Chinese Hong Kong, Fernando Solanas from Argentina, Glauber Rocha from Brazil, Theo Angelopoulos from Greece, Manoel de Oliveira from Portugal, and others. We would also like to organise a bigger festival of European films some time next year.

Is the society holding any film festivals in future?

"Yes, we would like to hold a Dutch film festival, a European film festival, an African film festival, and a Latin American film festival in future. Anybody who is interested in good films can become a member of the society. Annual subscription is one thousand takas for general members and five hundred takas for student members. Registration can be done during any of the on-going film sessions. Persons interested can contact at this e-mail a d d r e s s sabbirchowdhury@yahoo.com
