Interview

Art for heart's sake

Goutam Ghose talks about the film world around him

NDIAN High commission in Bangladesh screened a documentary on Bismillah Khan, a world famous Sanai maestro of the Indian Subcontinent by celebrated film maker Goutam Ghose on October 5. While Goutam's camera takes the audience along the alleys of Benaras, favourite city of this giant musician, he makes use of 'Pagla Sanai' as background music in his documentary. When Sanai ceases to play the audience listens to Bismillah Khan reminiscing his days of childhood and his immeasurable love and devotion to music. Gautam Ghose is no stranger to the art of filmmaking. He is known for his inimitable style and socialistic touch. Therefore, it's no surprise that his movie Dekha, starring legendary Bengali film actor Soumitra Chatterjee and actress Indrani Haldar, won the best regional film award in this year's National Film Festival. What's more, Soumitra Chatterjee received the Special Jury Award for his role of a blind poet in Dekha. However, Ghose created a furore when he rejected the award following allegations of nepotism and foul play in the National awards.

Chatterjee followed suit.

Pained and embarrassed at the injustices meted out to him, Chatterjee says, "Why should I accept an award that is given merely on lobbying skills? I have been associated with Satyajit Ray for so long, yet no one ever bothered to notice my talent.

"Now they have chosen to appease me at the fag end of my career by announcing a special jury award. I feel insulted. I had rejected an award in the past for the same reasons and my contention remains same even today.'

Equally upset is Ghose, who was the jury president in last vear's National Film Festival. The renowned film director now plans to write to the President of India vindicating his refusal of the award for best regional movie.

Following are excerpts from an interview with this great film maker: Q: How do you feel about the controversy that has plagued this year's National Film FestivalAwards? Well, to tell you the truth, I am extremely pained over the fraudulent manner the jurors declared this year's awards. However, my decision to return the award for best regional film for Dekha was not a publicity stunt, for I don't believe in sensationalism. I had to express my anguish and pain at the distressing reports in a section of media, which showed how the jury members had fallen prey to epotism and lobbying. To say that I was appalled would be an understatement. It was shocking to see jury members walking out of the Board in protest. Therefore, what I did was natural and a token protest of sorts against all malpractice were jury president?

To give you an instance, the manner in which Kiron Kher was adjudged best actress for her role in Bariwali was not technically justified. It was evident during the screening of Bariwali that Kiron had used a dubbed voice. In fact, Rita Koiral, who had given voice for Kiron, claimed it was her (Rita Koiral's) voice in the movie.

I was astonished to see Kiron mention that it was her original voice in the movie in the application form. Since it was stated in her application form, we couldn't do anything. Worse, I was told that even participants influenced the judgments. Some Awards?

I think the damage is irreparable. The Director of film festivals and the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting have a lot to do before they can restore the lost glory. They have to revamp the entire system. From selection of jury members, to the duration of viewing for nominated movies, everything must be changed.

Q: What are the suggestions in your letter to President K R Naravanan?

For example, I don't see the logic of short-listing over 150 films for final viewing. We get more than 150 feature films every year under the

But all these are difficult to be prove. Last year, after announcing the National Awards, I announced in a press conference that I had congratulated those who had lost out at the awards. I did it primarily because none of the judges had been able to evaluate their
