'Attacks on minorities
politically motivated'
STAFF CORRESPONDENT
The 11-party alliance yesterday described the post-election violence across the country, particularly attacks on religious minorities, as politically motivated and blasted the government for failing to protect the vulnerable groups and ensure their security.
The weaker section of population came under attacks while religious minorities and weaker segment of the majority were also attacked, leaders of the 11 left leaning political parties told reporters at a press conference in the city.
The press conference, organized at the Workers Party office, was addressed, among others, by alliance leaders - Nirmol Sen, Rashed Khan Menon, Manjorur Ahsan Khan and Saifuddin Ahmed Manik while Bimol Biswas, convenor of the party read out the written statement.
The leftist leaders categorically said the nature of attacks is peculiar and the assailants could not be pinpointed. They said members of minority community, particularly Hindus, were the main targets and victims of those attacks, but in some cases weaker section of Muslims, Buddhists and Christians were also came under attacks by the vested quarters in some areas.
"A vested quarter is out to cash in on the volatile political situation after the election and is trying to provoke and ignite communalism to create a law and order situation to jeopardise the traditional religious harmony and peace prevailing for years together in the country," Nirmol Sen said.
These communal attacks had proved that how dangerous the influence of black money, terrorism could be in the election, he added.
The leaders also said that the post-polls violence and attacks on a particular community are not isolated events, rather it a part of a deep-rooted conspiracy by a vested quarter to divide the nation

Children of the Kendriya Khelaghor Ashor brought out a procession in the city yesterday protesting the US attacks on Afghanistan. The tiny tots carried placards reading "We Want Peace, Not War".
