Theatre Reaching out to the masses

Bangladesh Potho Natok Parishad organises a colourful event at Suhrawardy Uddyan to mark the formal inauguration of this year's street drama season

AZIZ AMIRUL

UNDREDS of passersby at the Suhrawardy Uddyan watched in amazement the performance of Bangladesh Potho Natok Parishad.

Bangladesh Potho Natok Parishad staged three short plays to mark the inauguration of the annual street drama season in Bangladesh on November 2 near the entrance of the Uddyan.

The season began with leading theatre personalities such as Mamunur Rashid, Aly Zaker, Rokeya Rafiq Baby, Mannan Hira, Nasiruddin Yusuf, Golam Kuddus and Mizanur Rahman participation in a discussion on street theatre and tradition of street theatre in Bangladesh. They paid tributes to late S.M. Solaiman, one of the founders of the street drama association.

Mamunur Rashid highlighted different aspects of local drama and pointed out on its popularity among the common mass. Though a high number of cultural enthusiasts could be found here but unfortunately they have failed to admire and honour the performers as much as they loved the topic of performance. Speaking on street drama Mamun emphasised the need to make the art form popular.

Aly Zaker echoed Mamun and explained various features of street drama. He said that, more than any one else, a street drama worker could be a great spokesperson of the society to address the society. Street drama could be a more effective platform than any public rally or meeting. Street drama could be a fantastic way to reach the underprivileged people of the country for whom buying a ticket to watch a drama at Bailey Road amount to daydreaming.

The later part of the evening's proceedings witnessed over 30 minutes each, the prothe presentation of three dra- ductions included were Ponta mas. With a duration of little A k a l i by Arannyak, Ponta Akali, (a regional dialect of the term 'Panta bhat') reveals the selfish and hypocritical world of the nongovernment organisations in this country and how these NGOs are exploiting the unfortunate and deprived class of the country.

The protagonist Hares Ali in Ponta Akali, voices his protest against the usurpation of wealth by the elites of the society. However, after a lot of hassle the poor farmer could manage to break the shackles of the three wicked NGO bose villa

The village headman and his family brought Jorina enough misery to look for a living in the capital city. Here again she has to deal with all sorts of odds. The exploitative nature of certain nongovernment organisation in name of gender-based development forced Jorina to return to her village.

The third and final play titled Court-Marshall was about military coup and murder. This particular drama however, could provide hardly any amusement to the large gathering of Suhrawardy Uddyan mainly due its typically serious plot, often difficult for the common mass to interpret and understand.

Street drama, a bit different saw numerous production and staging of street drama with the participation of most of the well-reputed theatre groups of the country. Street drama has provided a fantastic platform to give expression to all kinds of social odds and tribulations in the society. The recurrent themes of street drama have been the misdeeds of religious fanaticism, political instability, racial discrimination and social inequality.

Street dramas played a vital role during the anti-Ershad movement. Khepa Pagla-r Pechal (Statement of Khepa, the insane), a political satire,
