Exploring the mood of Eid in dresses

Shatabdi's exclusive designer-wears will be on display in a four-day show beginning today at Arial Centre at Dhanmandi

ZIAUL KARIM

ESTHETICALLY pleasing and visually outstanding, Shabtabdi's festival collection is a unique addition to the festivity of Eid. Intricately designed and specially developed throughout the year for the Eid, Shatabdi's designer-wear is perfectly pitched and classy.

Artists throughout in human history have discovered that colour is the best tool to express mood and what lies at the core of Shatabdi's owner-designer Nadir Azad's fashion statement is colour. The warmth of colour and the mood of its festivity would greet the visitors at the exhibition showcasing a glittering array of dresses ranging from punjabi, sari and salwaar-

Traditional design is the reservoir where Nadira turns to get her inspiration. She then mingles the tradition with contemporary taste and mood.

Alpana, traditional floor painting, is the source she has frequented to develop her recent collection. She has also employed free hand painting, delicate embroidery to complete her repertoire for this Eid.

This year she has brought a few refreshing changes in her salwaar-kameez ensemble giving weight to the dupatta. The flowing dupatta " is something that adorns a dress and I have tried to focus on it so that it glows and brings the climax in the design of a salwaar-kameez set. Her exquisite muslin dupattas featuring fine hand-paint design of creepers growing from one end to the other. What will stand out for any visitor is the way Nadira handles her dresses as a composition. Each section of a dressbe that a dupatta, or a kameez harmoniously complements each other. Solely focused on festival and immaculately conscious about design and innovation, Shatabdi began its fashion journey in December 1999. Immediately, Shatabdi won the hearts of fashion conscious people of the country who would like to see a revival of tradition in contemporary fashion. Shatabdi's show at Shantiniketan in April this was a smashing hit with winning aficionados in vice-chancellor of Shantiniketan. In her Shantiniketan collection, Nadia embroidered lines from Tagore song into her sari collection, something remarkable in our fashion history. What is unique about her design is that she never repeats herself. Each design is an end itself giving her dress a value and taste of a fine art. She is for the revival of old traditional alpana and she has also a keen sense for modern abstract art. In her collection this duality is quite evident as the alpana designs assume an abstract look at the end.

She uses only environment friendly material for her salwaarkameez, sari, and pujabi collection. Cotton motka, half-silk are her preferred materials.

This year she has let her imagination flow and glow in designing the anchal. "Anchal's are special for me. I have put weight in anchal this year and kept the body of the sari stress free from heavy designs and patterns", says Nadira.

Affordable, Nadira's collection aims at a wide range of people belonging to almost every class. She has a brilliant array of saris ranging between each of Nadira's dress has used the design-space with an artist's eye and to sustain it over a whole range of dresses it something remarkable to be reckoned with Shatabdi's 2001 Eid collection with its delicate design and understanding of modernism and contemporary taste has captured the true mood of the festival in all its nuances.
