Reaching for a climax

7th International Short & Independent Film Festival, Dhaka 2001 continues to be a crowd puller and Bangladeshi films stay prominent with a variety of themes

AZIZ AMIRUL

As day six passed, the ongoing International Short & Independent Film Festival in city seemed to have gained a great degree of momentum. A total of 120 short fictional films, documentaries and animations from thirty-one countries have made their way in the festival and the audience were simply overwhelmed as they explored the films, rich in variety and cadence.

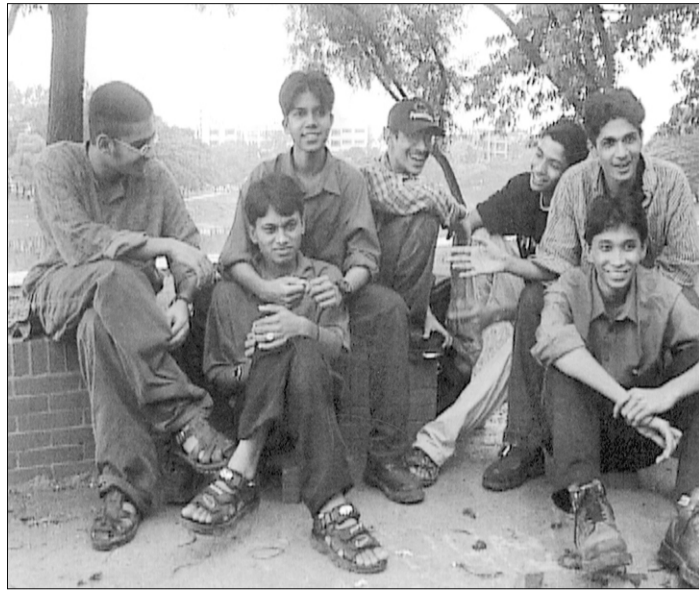

Entries from Europe, Latin America and Asia, especially 'La Vision' (Spain) and 'Madonna with a child' (Latvia) have managed to etch deep impression in minds of the viewers. Bangladeshi films, for obvious reasons, pulling capacity crowd every day.

Celebrated filmmakers of alter-selected from Bangladesh of which some of the more interesting and experimental makings rightly received high degree of appreciation.

A particular feature of the local entries was the diverse range of themes, each practically different from that of the other. Crisis of gender issue that of the Bengali female came up in a strong way in at least two works, most distinct being the subject of 'Naho Mata Naho Kannya', an interview-based documentary, where the speakers revealed their disgraceful experience of sexual harassment, mostly by close relations and known adults.

A colour compilation of 25 minutes duration, the film pinpointed the lustful, exploitative attitudes and habits of males towards females in our society. The makers of the film

Young members of a band group are posing for 'Our Boys', a documentary by Manzar-e-Hassin who, in his film, tries to explore the psychological profile of the youth unpleasant experience of juvenile days.

'We are working for the cause of female rights and to raise awareness against the ever-existing issue of male domination and perversion', mentioned one of the three female directors. She felt that sexual harassment of a female has always remained a matter of taboo in our conservative circle and none could discuss the shameful incidents with guardians, thus offered a sort of promotion to the dishonorable act.

'Iti Salma', under the able direction of AKM Zakaria reflected a similar notion of the female fate, here being the contemporary crisis of family relationship between married couples. The 8-minute fictional short film capitalised its success through unique presentation of close-up scenes of objects in an isolated bedroom left behind by the dejected wife. Pieces of torn letter remained scattered across the red carpet while a pan-shot of the lens brought out subtle emotional values of the former resident. All along the episode, the unattended telephone continued to ring in a loud tone, thus able to inject life and tension at the setting. Salma, probably, remained under observation of the inmates and was made a rag-doll of the family, ironically, the real rag-doll on the shelf symbolised the young lady after her departure! The theme based upon a short story by Hasnat Abdul Hye, reiterated the complexities of male-female relationship in the modern-day living conditions and the challenges between the ideology of self-orientation and the institution of family life.

The lack of basic rights of children, like that of women, have become theme for 'Kalighar / Black House', a half-hour colour documentary by Tareq Shahriar and 'Lokman, His Dreams His Reality', directed by Moynul Huda of 'Steps for Development'.

A scene from 'Our Boys' showing the band members in performance at a concert

Rekha, Aysha and Jashim three kids who worked in Dhaka city named their dry-cell breaking factory as 'Kalighar', a place full of dust and hazardous carbon residues. This documentary had won the best award in its category in Tehran International Short Film Festival held earlier this year.

Like the three young central characters, Lokman appeared as a teenager who hailed from Sylhet and had by now become an adult in mind. Fighting against all odds, the boy had set a firm footing in Dhaka streets singing with his younger sister and blind father to earn a square meal.

'My Migrant Soul', a 30-minute colour documentary by Yesmin Kabir is a painful narration of the life story of one Babu, who had been to Malaysia as an illegal migrant worker. Later on, he died due to some unknown reason. The mother and sister of the deceased gave their interview and the recorded voice of Babu, sent earlier by himself to his mother was included in the film. Titled in Bangla as 'Porobashi Mon Amar', this documentary won the award for best film in South Asia festival in Nepal this year and also picked up the NETPAC Award in a documentary festival of Japan.

'Sharat '71', a 26-minute colour fiction by Morshedul Islam, reminded the audiences of the bloodshed during our war of liberation. The film depicted the Bengali community's fate through the characterisation of a little boy, Monon and his pet Mynah. The caged bird, symbolised the Bengali population who used to be tormented to death if found uttering in mother tongue. 'Shei Rater Kotha Bolte Eshechi' presented a similar portfolio trying to reconstruct a theme that revolved round the harrowing night of March 26, 1971.

Issues of environmental awareness got prominence in documentaries like 'Sundarbans' and 'The Dhaka That Was, The Buriganga That Was'. The present condition of some famous mansions and architectural relics of old Dhaka could be viewed in the latter production.

As felt by the critics, alternative cinema in Bangladesh has come of age. And possibly we are about to witness resurgence in new cinema.

Monon, a young actor in 'Sharat '71' native cinema have all their entries in the festival along with new faces like AKM Zakaria, Yesmin Kabir, Moynul Huda and others. The trio of Farzana Rupa, Lutfunnahar Mausumi and Shabnam Ferdousi too, deserve excellent credentials in this regard.

Thirteen productions have been have most successfully depicted the age-old intriguing pain and disgrace burdened by the women of the Bengali community through pictorialisation of some bold and revealing interviews of sexually harassed victims. Several young and elderly ladies from a cross-section of the society narrated their

TODAY'S HIGHLIGHTS

- Ekushey: 9:05 p.m. Friday Drama Krishna Kumari. A tribal character Pushiram Santal lives with his only daughter Bhashanti. The motherless girl falls in love with a young Santal, Matla. Pushiram, the landless peasant gets a job in the farming land of Shyamol Babu when the owner returns to the village. Bhashanti is employed as the maid of Shyamol Babu. Both Pushiram and Matla are concerned about any harm of Bhashanti from Shyamol's end.
- Ekushey: 8:00 p.m. Free Cinema Free Expression. The program is arranged in observance of the ongoing International Short & Independent Film Festival with the topic of 'films on women'. Women filmmakers are advancing with bold attitude alongside their male counterparts but it remains a question whether the difference of attitude between the two gender-based film types are a natural trend or is being done for its necessity?
- StarWorld: 8:00 & 11:30 pm. Bugs. A hacker taps into the central prison computer and releases a group of convicts before sentences are up.
