Book Fair

CULTURE

AZIZ AMIRUL

HAKA book fair has been a perfect gift for the city's book lovers. Inaugurated by the Prime Minister Khaleda Zia at the venue of National Parade Ground in Tejgaon, the fair came as a refreshing event after the month of Ramadan.

The two-week long fair has once again provided the book lovers and bookworms to browse and buy the titles of their choice. An only international book fair in Bangladesh, the Dhaka Book Fair generates tremendous enthusiasm among the general readers. The presence of a big crowd at fair every day belies the general claim that the size of the readers in the country is shrinking.

With 108 stalls representing different local and foreign publishing houses, the organisers of the fair seemed more than satisfied. Ticket sales' of approximately Tk. 22,000 on Friday last only was an indicator of a large reading public.

. 'Reading habit among the community members have definitely improved over the last few years. We are highly pleased of the visitors' courtesy as they are welcoming our arrangement through payment', mentioned Shafiqul Islam, Deputy Director of National Book Centre, well-supported by Suhita Sultana, a research officer of the same organisation.

This year's book fair has featured several special arrangements one of which has been the threereputed authors and visiting readers. The author-reader interaction that continued from January 3 till January 5 has turned out to be the best attraction, so far, of the entire preparation.

School debate, recitation, musical soiree and seminars on various aspects of reading among the public made the festival, one of superior standard. The fair presented a debate yesterday afternoon among students of higher secondary on a topic -- 'Modern technology is hampering the reading interest'. January 9 till 11 will feature three seminars on book reading at 4:30 in the evening. Entitled 'Hundred years' library', a discussion-based event would be held at 3:30 pm on January 12 where representatives of 14 different ancient libraries of the country are to attend.

The fair venue has simply become a wonder spot both for readers and authors as well for the publishing houses. Over the past few days any regular visitor could observe a massive cross-section of people swarming in with a wide variety of demand on books and literary publications, on a diverse range of topics and themes.

'It is a blessing for us that this year the venue is spacious otherwise it would have been a truly difficult matter regarding accommodation', observed Jakir Ibne Solaiman, a publisher from Saschsanda Prokation. 'An irritating issue lies in the fact that a particular publisher has to sell his very own published books with a strict ban against him from selling books of other publications', added Jakir.

This correspondent met Shamsun Nahar, author of Bhalobashar Nilduar, a collection of poems by the female poet has created considerable sensation among the young readers of love themes, beside the stall of Saschhanda. Stalls from Iran, India and Japan have pulled a major section every day and especially, the Iranian pavilion sponsored by the Embassy in Bangladesh could be regarded as a star attraction in the middle of the festive venue. Inclusion of multimedia based audio-visual unit seemed to bring elation in the whole atmosphere. A large number of book connoisseurs, visiting various stalls, were found asking for fictions by more of the regional authors like Shirshendu and Sunil. Humayun Ahmed's latest novel Neel Manush, published for the fair topping the bestseller list.

Among the juveniles, horror classics and fictional publication of detective plots created amazing stipulation, various comic serials being the other specialised category of demanding books among children and the pre-teen members who formed a major proportion of the visitors.

'It seemed that this year the fair has managed to achieve considerable success in terms of organising ability as well in pulling crowds to the superb site', stated Abul Hashem, a regular and enthusiastic visitor of fairs and festivals. 'Here I found books on horror topics to be the most popular, both among young and adults in addition to a great demand for topics related to love themes, specially those of fictional types', commented Hashem before heading towards the exit as dusk was spreading her veil all across the bustling ground. The book fair continues till January 15, from 2 pm till 8 pm every day.
