Admission test CU extends deadline for submission of forms

CU CORRESPONDENT
The deadline for submitting admission forms for the 2001-2002 academic session of Chittagong University (CU) has been extended till January 26. The university authority has extended the deadline as many admission seekers could not submit their forms due to prevailing stalemate on the campus. About 45,000 admission forms were sold this year, but most of the students did not turn up to submit those. The admission seekers have lost confidence in this university as it lacks congenial atmosphere, many of the teachers and students said. The Chittagong University lost 288 academic days last year due to conflict between the rival student organisations, and there is no effective steps to put an end to the deadlock.
