Newly-crowned Australian Open champion Thomas Johansson had a few behind-the-scenes dramas on the morning of his greatest tennis accomplishment here Sunday.

During all the commotion over his upset victory over Russian Marat Safin the low-key Swede revealed that his coach Magnus Tideman had forgotten to order a courtesy car to the stadium to play his final.

"I was close to missing my match because my coach forgot to call a car," Johansson told the crowd at his winner's ceremony on centre court. "I had to call a taxi to get here."

Asked if the taxi-driver had recognised his passenger, Johansson replied drily: "Yes, when we got out of the car, he said 'Good luck', so yes, I think so, yes.

"Maybe I am going to consider to have a new coach who can call (for a car) the day before."
