Fate of CMCH fair price medicine shop uncertain

NURUL ALAM
The fate of the 'fair price medicine shop' on the Chittagong Medical College and Hospital (CMCH) premises now hangs in the balance as the hospital authority asked its owner to close it down. The authority gave a deadline for the shutdown in January, but the shop owner has been continuing his business even after the expiry of the deadline. The shop owner has also started a legal battle by filing a writ with the court against the authority that issued a notice on January 8 asking the owner to close his shop within ten days. The notice came in line with the order issued by the health ministry to the hospital authority to scrap the contract with the owner of the medicine shop, hospital sources said. The ministry gave the order assigning the reason that the contract was not consistent with its policy, administrative sources said. Meanwhile, the shop owner is lobbying the concerned ministry for allowing him to carry on business. The 'fair price medicine shop' was set up on the premises of CMCH several months ago after receiving approval from the immediate-past government. CMCH is the first government hospital in the country to have such an outlet that sells medicine at cheaper rate. The fair price shop came as a relief for the patients as they had to buy medicine at exorbitant prices from other pharmacies mushrooming around the Chittagong Medical College Hospital. These pharmacies allegedly charge prohibitive prices for the life-saving drugs, sources said. However, there are also allegations against the fair price medicine shop. Sources complained that the shop is supposed to sell medicines at a price 15 per cent less than the market price, but it did not follow the practice evenly as per contract. The owner, however, denied the allegations.
