10 pc duty cut on rice import

RAFIQ HASAN

The government yesterday withdrew the 10 per cent regulatory duty on import of rice to increase supply in the market.

A Statutory Regulatory Order (SRO) of the National Board of Revenue (NBR) in this regard became effective yesterday.

The duty was imposed during the tenure of the last caretaker government to discourage rice import following bumper production of rice.

After the withdrawal, the duty on rice import is 33 per cent including 25 per cent customs duty.

An inter-ministerial meeting at the ministry of food on April 1 had recommended withdrawal of the regulatory duty following sudden increase in prices of rice in retail markets. NBR officials now think the supply will increase and prices stabilise.

In February, the government lowered the LC margin for rice import to 25 per cent from 100 per cent to increase import by private sector importers.

Trade talks inconclusive, roll into third day

INAM AHMED and SHAHRIAR KARIM

Nine hours of nerve-tingling trade talks, punctuated by stubborn stances and walkouts, ended inconclusively yesterday with both Indian and Bangladeshi sides still far from agreeing on some vital issues.

The negotiators are set to sit again this morning on an unscheduled extended session with both sides touting their joint declarations. But if the last midnight developments are anything to go by, Dhaka and New Delhi are unlikely to soften their rigid stances, meeting sources said.

Earlier, both sides seemed to have edged towards a settlement in the two-day talks, with the Indians agreeing to allow free access to 16-category Bangladeshi items and Bangladesh finding no problem in lifting its ban on the import of sugar and yarn from India through land ports. Delhi said it would come up with the list of specific items at today's morning session.

Delhi also wanted Dhaka to commit on the transit or transhipment facility. But Bangladesh said this along with all other non-trade issues should be discussed at the Joint Economic Commission (JEC) meeting. And a JEC committee will look into these matters.

But things took a different twist at the dinner table last night when the Indians said a declaration on transit or transhipment must come at today's meeting if there were to be any agreement. It also wanted a 'satisfactory resolution' for opening of the land ports. But Dhaka found that transit or transhipment is an issue that also involves the foreign ministry and the opening of the land ports is the finance ministry's concern.

As such, both sides are learnt to have the propositions 'unacceptable'.

However, today's session will have the final say.

Meantime, Commerce Minister Amir Khosru Mahmud Chowdhury left for Thimpu to attend a meeting of the South Asian Federation of Exchanges (SAFE). Prior to his departure, he is said to have advised the Bangladeshi negotiators to try their best to cut an amicable deal.

Earlier, after the first day's tumultuous session that even threatened a premature end to the talks, the negotiators met half an hour behind schedule yesterday at 10:30am. But only 30 minutes into the meeting, the talks broke down.

Trade negotiators of the two countries had been able to agree on some

New law to eliminate AL, says Hasina

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Opposition leader and Awami League President Sheikh Hasina yesterday said the government enacted the 'Law and Order Disruption Crimes (Speedy Trial) Act' to launch an 'Awami League cleansing operation'.

Giving her reaction to the new stringent law at her Dharmondhi residence last night, Hasina said, "This is enacted to victimise political opponents. First, they (the government) had repressed our leaders and workers, then they grabbed their property and raped the women, and then they sacked pro-opposition public servants. Now, they are ready to launch an Awami League cleansing operation under cover of the law."

"The government wants to establish a single-party rule and eliminate the opposition," she added.

Replying to a query, the former prime minister said, "We may go for legal battle against this black law, but I don't know whether we'll get justice."

She was critical of the provision for summary trial under the new law and feared that this would hinder people's right to justice.

"Had the government been really serious about curbing terrorism then why had it nominated criminals for ward commissioner posts in the city corporations," asked Hasina.

Hasina was highly critical of the government and the Election Commission for what she dubbed as their indifference to the criminal candidates.

While giving examples of repression and attacks on political opponents,

Where are our leaders leading us to?

Part 3: Taliban in Bangladesh?

MAHFUZ ANAM

WE have many reasons for our umbrage at the FEER (Far Eastern Economic Review) article, Beware of Bangladesh. After a bloodletting Liberation War and nearly two decades of military and quasi-military rule we re-established democracy more than a decade ago. We have maintained a steady growth of above five per cent, made significant progress in mass education, especially girls', and through the work of the NGOs have somewhat advanced the lot of rural women. Work of Grameen Bank, BRAC, Proshika, ASA and many other smaller organisations have contributed significantly to our progress. We, more than anybody else, are aware that we have "miles to go before we sleep" and that there are enormous challenges that lie before us.

At the very moment when some of our major achievements face a slump in global demand - like our RMG sector in the post-September world - and a hostile West against Muslim countries suspected to have links with global terrorism, we are suddenly being burdened with a fundamentalist image that can easily make us a pariah state in the context of the present world. More areas invaded, battle in Jenin rages on

AFP, AP, Nablus

Under heavy US pressure, Israel withdrew yesterday from two Palestinian town, but soldiers invaded other areas of the West Bank and fought dozens of beleaguered gunmen in refugee camp in what was emerging as the deadliest battle of the 12-day military offensive.

Israeli public radio, quoting security sources, said hundreds of fighters in the Jenin camp - compared in the Israeli press to the legendary Jewish resistance at Masada against the Romans - were confined to a tiny area measuring just 70 metres by 70 metres.

The radical Islamic Jihad's Jenin chief, Mahmud Tawalbeh, who was freed from the town's prison in February by an armed Palestinian mob, led them, it added.

The hard core of Palestinians are expected to fight to the death, and were setting off explosive charges of around 100 kilos (220 pounds) against the slowly encroaching Israeli forces, the radio said.
