Prime Minister Khaleda Zia yesterday called for taking a New Year resolution to ensure people's welfare and refrain from doing anything that goes against the interest of the country and the people.

"If we can remain firm in our resolution and if we are sincere about implementing it, I am sure, we will present the nation a New Year full of success," she told a function at the Prime Minister's Bhaban, marking Pahela Baishakh, the first day of Bangla New Year 1409.

Ministers, MPs, political leaders, diplomats, journalists, cultural personalities and senior civil and military bureaucrats attended the function.

"The sense of oneness of our nation has to be consolidated through universal festivity of the Bengali New Year," the prime minister said calling upon all to work toward materialising the dreams of national life.

Powell gets cold response from Syria, Lebanon

AFP, Damascus

US Secretary of State Colin Powell met Syrian President Bashar al-Assad yesterday for talks on Middle East peace efforts, as the Damascus official press hit out at alleged US bias in favour of Israel.

The two men spoke for 90 minutes, a US official said, but there was no immediate indication of the tenor of their meeting.

Powell was subjected earlier the same day to tough talks in neighbouring Lebanon, which Syria dominates, before he was due to return to Israel to press ahead with mediation efforts between the Jewish state and the Palestinians.

Official Damascus Radio, meanwhile, said a proposal from Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon to hold an international conference on the Middle East was nothing more than an exercise in "deception".

In Beirut, Powell's warning against "aggressive actions" from southern Lebanon was strongly rejected by a government for which anti-Israeli guerrilla attacks are legitimate resistance operations against occupation.

Lebanese President Emile Lahoud called on Washington "not to be affected by Israeli pressures and positions that present the Lebanese resistance in Shebaa Farms as terrorist acts," Lebanon's Foreign Minister Mahmud Hammud said.

Lebanese Hezbollah guerrillas backed by Damascus and Tehran are fighting Israeli troops holding the Shebaa Farms area seized from Syria in 1967 and now claimed by Beirut with Damascus' consent.

Hezbollah attacks have escalated since Israel mounted its invasion of the West Bank on March 29 to demolish Palestinian "terrorist infrastructure."

Lahoud also told Powell that the escalation on the Israel-Lebanon border was the fault of Israel's military operations that have enraged the Arab world, according to Hammud.

Powell, who was greeted at Damascus airport by Syrian Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shara, said he wanted to "brief them on my efforts to bring an end to the violence... and hear from my Syrian colleagues their assessment."

"The situation in the southern part of Lebanon and some of the dangers with respect to firing over the Blue Line," the Lebanese-Israeli border marked by the United Nations, were also on the agenda, he told journalists.

Syria has not commented on the recent upsurge in Hezbollah attacks, but political sources here stressed that Damascus views such attacks as aimed at "liberating land and defending against Israeli aggression."

On a visit to northern Israel on Friday, Powell said, "I call upon nations who have influence over Hezbollah, especially Syria, to do everything in their power to restrain Hezbollah and to stop this kind of activity before it widens the conflict in the region."

In addition hardline Palestinian groups, which Lebanon says it does not support and is trying to curb, have fired rockets across the border into northern Israel.

Just hours before Powell arrived,

Uproar in parliament for ouster of Gujarat CM

AP, New Delhi

Opposition parties stalled work in India's Parliament yesterday, demanding the ouster of the chief minister of Gujarat state for failing to stop recent Hindu-Muslim violence.

The national Intelligence Bureau said yesterday that 833 people were killed in the western state. Most of the victims were Muslim.

As Parliament reopened after a three-week recess, opposition lawmakers from more than a dozen political parties rushed to the well of the lower house shouting slogans, blaming Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee's party for the carnage in Gujarat. The western state's chief minister belongs to Vajpayee's Hindu-nationalist Bharatiya Janata Party.

Deputy speaker PM Sayeed adjourned the house until the afternoon. However, the raucousness in the house continued after lawmakers reassembled and Sayeed had to adjourn until Tuesday. Opposition parties also forced a similar adjournment in Parliament's upper house.

The main opposition Congress Party has already threatened that it would block proceedings in Parliament until Gujarat Chief Minister Narendra Modi was dismissed. The party wants Parliament to suspend all other work and debate the violence in Gujarat and the role of Modi's administration.

Human rights groups and opposition parties have accused Modi and his administration of doing little to stop Hindu rioters from killing hundreds of Muslims, destroying their businesses and leaving tens of thousands of them homeless. Hindu militants went on a retaliatory rampage after a Muslim crowd set a train car on fire on Feb 27, killing 60 Hindu activists.

Two key allies of Vajpayee the Telugu Desam Party and the Trinamool Congress have also demanded Modi's dismissal. Vajpayee, however, rejected the demand last week, risking a crisis for his 22-party coalition.

The governing coalition's survival in the 545-seat lower house of Parliament depends on the support of these two parties, who together have 37 lawmakers. However, the parties have not said they would withdraw from Vajpayee's National Democratic Alliance.

Abductors free housewife

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Narayanganj

Housewife Asma Mukta, kidnapped on March 31, returned to her parents at Fatullah at about 8:30 last night.

Her father said the kidnappers left her at Shapla Square at Motijheel in Dhaka at around 7:30 pm. Then she came back to his house. She was brought to the Shapla Square blindfolded in a microbus.

Soon after she reached home, Fatullah police took her into 'safe custody'.

Mukta's father Nazrul Islam Bhuiyan said the kidnappers led by one Dipu released Mukta out of fear following a number of newspaper reports in this regard.

Mukta in her statement to police said, after abduction, the criminals made her unconscious using chloroform. When she regained sense, she found herself in a garments factory godown. Next day, she was taken to a house in Dhaka.

She was kept in a room there with its doors and windows closed all the time. Only Dipu entered the room at times. She was beaten by him several times.

She was given only dry food, she said.

Mukta was married to one Alamgir, a Bangladeshi immigrant in Canada, about seven months ago.

A graduate from Narayanganj Government College, she had gone to her sister's house at Masdair in the town on March 31. When she was returning to her parents the same day, Dipu along with some other youths kidnapped her at gun point.

Sources in the area claimed that Dipu, allegedly a BNP activist, used to tease her often. All her papers for going to Canada were ready. Knowing this, Dipu became desperate and kidnapped her, the sources said.
