Book launching

A unique literary rendezvous

The launching of Justice Habibur Rahman's new book Rabindra-Rachanay Aini Bhabana or Tagore's Musings on Law occasioned a riveting literary evening

Rabindra-Rachanay Aini Bhabana

THE evening was crisp and the green velvety lawn of the author Habibur Rahman's Maghbazar residence in the city was glistening after a languid morning rain. The happy chirping of birds lent the evening a Tagorian ambience, perfect for the launching of a book on Tagore.

"The idea was first to visit Habibur Rahman and hand him the author's copy," said the publisher of the book Mohiuddin Ahmed of University Publishers Ltd. "Then we thought since Tagore's 141st birth anniversary falls on the very next day, Wednesday May 8, why not invite literary personalities of the country and meet informally for an interactive evening."
Forming a full circle with chairs and sofas on the sprawling lawn, the literary giants and big names of the country's cultural circuit indulged in an intimate interaction that was new to the country's literary landscape. The talk was veering through and meandering across topics as varied, as Thai food habit to Tagore's potential as a barrister to preparation of a local essence called Amber.
Bangladesh's premier English language poet Kaiser Haq was sitting next to the leading literary and art critic of the country Syed Manzoorul Islam. Kaiser Haq has just published his fifth book of poems The Logopathic Reviewer's Song. Soon Fakrul Alam, critically acclaimed translator of Jibanananda Das, joined them. Together they -- Kaiser Haq, Manzoorul Islam and Fakrul Alam -- are better known as the holy trinity in our literary firmament. These three sit on the editorial of The Six Seasons Review, the bi-annual literary journal published from Bangladesh.

Prolific poet, novelist and dramatist Syed Shamsul Haq was engrossed with firebrand cultural activist Waheedul Haq, who turned 79 this year. In one section of the circle, scientist-turned-photographer Noazesh Ahmed, who has recently published his photo-commentary on Rabindranath Tagore's Chinnapatra, a collection of letters Tagore wrote to his niece Indira between 1889 and 1895, was sharing his thoughts on the book with illustrious professor of English and translator of Shakespeare's sonnets into Bengali Professor Zillur Rahman Siddique. A walking encyclopedia on plants and flowers, Noazesh has always been an impressive talker. He has his own unique style of narrating stories, which is compelling and magnetic to his listeners. The ritual of Thai people's durian eating in Noazesh's commentary was fascinating to listen to.

Crimson glow of the fading evening light slants on the author Habibur Rahman

Editor of the daily Pratham Alo Matur Rahman arrived, when the tempo of the gathering reaching its crescendo with the arrival of mouthwatering snacks, with a bouquet and a sponge chocolate cake.
Publisher of the book Mohiuddin Ahmed put a little brake to the flow of the chitchat to present the author's copy of the Rabindra-Rachanay Aini Bhabana to Habibur Rahman. "Tagore's musings on law has brought out a new Tagore to the surface. The legal mind of Tagore has been brilliantly investigated by Habibur Rahman, himself an illustrious practitioner of law," commented the publisher of the title.
As darkness fell, the guests were exposed to mosquitoes and before discussing legal aspects of mosquito bites the memorable evening came to an end.

Cinema

Of love and agony

Charuibhati, a Dream Factory production reaches the audience through a premiere at Sufia Kamal auditorium in the city

TAWFIQUE ALI

THE city's cine-enthusiasts savoured a sensitive portrayal of eternal emotions like love and agony in Charuibhati, a film by Mostafa Sarwar Faruquee, at its premier show on April 29 evening. Written by Anisul Huq, the 100-minute film is satirically rich and focuses on the inconsistencies of urban life.
There are stress, mechanism, hypocrisy and many other evils in city life along side compelling urge for an exit from those aspects of life. Curse exists in different forms being hidden behind manifold blessings and amenities of urban life. In this kind of life style, individualism and modernism affect young people's relationship. They keep on pretending without reacting seriously. Pretension and truth go on hand in hand in their lives. Inwardly each of these people turns into a forlorn entity despite being part of the chaotic city community.

As the plot of the story unfolds, the film offers its audience with humour and simple pleasure of romance and wooing. The central character of Faisal Ahmed is a university student of architecture. He calls Sathi, a classmate of his, as Bou, meaning wife yet there is no emotional affinity yet between them. He is rather inclined towards his young teacher Fahmida. In this case he is somewhat adventurous in expression of his affinity for her. In the opening scene we see him making anonymous phone calls to her to have chats. While she lives with her younger sister in Dhaka, Fahmida's husband and only son stay in London. Her relationship with her husband is very cold and is about to give in. Worrying about her son's fate she delays the legal procedure of divorce. At such a juncture, Faisal, an ardent lover, develops a clandestine and illicit affair with the young lady. News of Fahmida's amorous adventure soon flies to London that naturally enrages her husband. The circumstances reach a critical stage from where she retreats and tends to withdraw from her extra marital relationship. Enraged by humiliation and rejection, Faisal makes his affinity for Sathi in public, at a friend's party. This episode soon falls in crisis when Fahmida poses a vindictive attitude towards Sathi. She harasses her at a jury board during an academic examination. Sathi fails in the exam. Faisal protests Fahmida's vindictive act but on the contrary he still entertains his inclination for her. Sathi grows suspicions about Faisal's integrity and commitment to her passion. The viewers observe a tension out of a triangular love affair. At one stage of this hide and seek game, Faisal's unfair play comes in light. A critical love affair, both extra marital and pre marital, gives in at length. Each individual suffers from inevitable affliction of life.

Alongside renowned professional performers, some amateurs too, play well in the film. Mamunul Huq is one of them who, without any theatrical background, who certainly earns audience's applause for his consistent acting. "Director of the film Charuibhati is my friend who offered me a role and I just made my mind up for it. Acting is a fun," Mamun says to this correspondent.

Elora Gaohar who plays the role of Fahmida, is another novice performer who manages to act successfully in line with those professional ones. Aupee Karim plays Sathi while Enamul Huq appears in the role of a professor in Charuibhati.

Dr. Enamul Huq, Elora Gaohar and Hasan appear in a scene from the drama
