

Japan squad named Nakamura not in

AFP, Tokyo

Shunsuke Nakamura, the Yokohama Marinos midfielder who has attracted interest from Spanish giants Real Madrid, has surprisingly missed out on a place in Japan's World Cup squad, announced here on Friday.

Nakamura, a 23-year-old regarded as one of the most technically gifted players in Japan, was thought to have done enough to ensure a place in the squad after scoring two impressive goals when Japan drew with Honduras 3-3 in a friendly earlier this month.

But he missed out to a midfield brimming with talent that includes Parma playmaker Hidetoshi Nakata, Feyenoord's Shinji Ono, Junichi Inamoto of Arsenal and Alessandro "Alex" Santos of Shimizu S-Pulse.

The inclusion of the Brazilian-born Alex, who only obtained Japanese nationality late last year, effectively cost Nakamura his place as they both play down the left side of midfield -- a position that Ono can also fill.

Jubilo Iwata veteran Hiroshi Nanami, the player of the tournament when Japan won their second Asian Cup in 2000, was also sidelined from the midfield line-up. The former Venezia midfielder has only just recovered from a foot injury.

Striker Masashi Nakayama, who scored Japan's only World Cup goal four years ago in France, returns to the squad after missing seven of the national team's eight pre-World Cup friendlies.

Other forwards included Kashima team-mates Takayuki Suzuki and Atsushi Yanagisawa and Cerezo Osaka's Akinori Nishizawa, who is still recovering from an emergency operation to remove his appendix last week.

Japan's French coach Philippe Troussier was absent from the press conference announcing the squad as he is in Europe to watch Belgium, one of Japan's first round group opponents, play France this weekend. Russia and Tunisia make up the group.

In a statement, Troussier said he had made his choice after considering the physical, technical, tactical and mental balance of the squad.

"They must be responsible for a mission to represent Japan," he said.

"I 100 percent trust the players whom I selected. I just hope that they believe in their own football, are proud of being chosen, and do their best.

"I also hope that they keep their concentration high until the end of our mission, and take responsibility," he added.

Troussier's decision to miss the squad announcement in Tokyo has been fiercely criticised here with some newspapers even suggesting he was too busy attempting to negotiate a move to a European club after the World Cup.

The inclusion of Alex came as no surprise. The dreadlocked 24-year-old, who only made his debut against Ukraine in March, is considered the best dribbler in the J-league.

His driving runs down the left earned him the league's player of the year award in 1999 and he was a key force behind his club's Asian Cup Winners Cup victory the following year.

Nakamura had been expected to move to Real Madrid after signing a deal with Yokohama which allows him to leave after the World Cup but the deal has since fallen through, according to press reports here.

Pele expects the unexpected

AP, London

World Cup superstar Pele fears for the standard of play at this summer's championship but believes it will be full of surprises.

The three-time winner, who burst onto the scene as a 17-year-old in 1958, believes that the Brazilian team he served for four World Cups will, for a change, be something of a dark horse in the 17th championship and outsiders such as Portugal and Cameroon might prove strong contenders.

But Pele is alarmed that the thousands of fans who travel to Japan and Korea for the May 31-June 30 championship to see 32 nations chase soccer's biggest title could be let down by what they see.

He fears many of the players are so tied to their clubs by lucrative contracts that they no longer perform 100 percent for their countries.

"One of my concerns is the quality of football," Pele told World Soccer magazine. "I was worried about what I saw in the friendlies that the teams have been playing over the past few months.

"Many of the players were more concerned about their club tournaments. They were frightened of getting injured because that would upset their club coach and that, in turn, would have given the club's directors an excuse to stop them going off to play for their country again.

"It's more difficult for the Latin American countries because, if they wanted their best players, they had to send to Europe for them. If they didn't, they had to use home-based players who knew they had little chance of making the final squad of 23."

Pele cited examples that title candidates Argentina, Paraguay and rookie Ecuador played warm up games far away from their home-lands.

IT'S PARTY TIME: Real Madrid players celebrate winning the Champions League up on the statue in Cibeles Square in front of the public in the Spanish capital on May 16.

Heroes back in Madrid

REUTERS, Madrid

The Spanish capital was brought to a standstill when Real Madrid returned home to a heroes' welcome on Thursday following their record ninth European Cup triumph.

Thousands of jubilant fans lined the route taken by the club's open-top bus from the airport to the city centre where the team were given a series of official receptions by local government dignitaries.

Traffic ground to a halt as cars pulled in and honked their horns before letting the all-white double-decker bus emblazoned with the number nine speed past, together with its escort of siren-blasting motorbikes.

Curious office workers peered out of tower blocks in the hope of catching a glimpse of the team, fans dangled flags and scarves from the bridges along the route, while many more decided to congregate in the city's Puerta del Sol where the team made its official stop.

The players, led by club captain Fernando Hierro and striker Raul, later emerged on the balcony of the city's town hall to show off the massive silver trophy to the delirious fans.

Zinedine Zidane, the star of Wednesday's triumph against Bayer Leverkusen with his spectacular winning goal, kept a characteristically low profile, but the constant chants of "Zizou, Zizou" eventually forced the quietly-spoken Frenchman to hold the trophy aloft for the fans.

A special cheer was also reserved for young Iker Casillas, who became a hero after coming on to replace the injured first-choice goalkeeper Cesar mid-way through the second half.

The 20-year-old local-born player made a string of superb reflex saves in the dying minutes of the match to help Real to hang on for victory and claim their third Champions League title in five years.

The team is due to give thanks for their victory at the city's cathedral before moving on to the Cibeles fountain, the traditional site used by the club to celebrate its triumphs.

Real have then arranged a special reception for the team in its Santiago Bernabeu stadium, whose 75,000 capacity is expected to be stretched to the limit to accommodate the fans wanting to join in the celebrations.

But the city-wide party is expected to continue long after tonight's official festivities have been drawn to a close.

Costly US rout

REUTERS, East Rutherford, New Jersey

Josh Wolff grabbed two goals to lead the United States in their 5-0 drubbing of Jamaica in a World Cup warm-up.

The match, played before a crowd of 30,659 at Giants Stadium, was marred by minor injuries to three U.S. players, including potential World Cup starters goalkeeper Kasey Keller and forward Clint Mathis.

Mathis, who has scored six times in 10 matches this year, struck a brilliant goal two minutes after the interval, limped off in the 63rd minute, 10 minutes after Keller left with a bruised knee.

Bastia defender Greg Vanney also left the game in the second half with a sprained left knee and will be evaluated before Sunday's friendly with the Netherlands in Massachusetts.

U.S. coach Bruce Arena, who lost Chris Armas for the World Cup after the midfielder tore his anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee at the weekend in a friendly against Uruguay, said the injuries were not serious.

Mathis said he had the nail on his big toe broken in half after he was stepped on by a Jamaican defender as he scored. He was expected to miss a day or two of training and would be evaluated before the Netherlands match.

Keller, who was tested only once in the match when Linval Dixon forced the Tottenham Hotspur goalkeeper to stretch to his left to stop a seventh-minute bid, said he took a knock just below the knee.

"If it was a World Cup game, I don't think I would have come out," Keller said. "It just started to swell up so it made sense to come out and get it checked. I'm not worried. I think it is just a bone bruise."

Although primarily used as a reserve, Wolff made a strong case for inclusion in the team with a pair of superb strikes, the first, a diving header at the left-hand post after a Joe-Max Moore cross in the 32nd minute.

He notched his second at 60 minutes as he took a pass from Landon Donovan and struck a 15-metre blast to the upper right corner for the 3-0 lead.

Donovan struck a fourth for the U.S. six minutes from time before substitute DaMarcus Beasley capped the scoring in stoppage time with a drive from 12 metres.

Hiddink wants more

AFP, Busan

Ahn Jung-Hwan showed some exquisite skills as South Korea demolished Scotland but coach Guus Hiddink blasted the side for getting too big for their boots in the process.

The tough Dutchman insisted the Koreans, who won 4-1 Thursday to lift their World Cup hopes, should have finished off the Scots in the first half when they led 1-0 and completely dominated the game.

"I wasn't happy with the last 10-12 minutes of the first half. We got a bit 'showey' which I don't like.

"When your opponents are on the ropes then you must finish them off and we were not ruthless enough in the box," said Hiddink.

Despite his complaints, Hiddink still insists the Koreans, now unbeaten in six matches, can put on a show to really impress their fans at the World Cup which starts in two weeks.

"We are on schedule for the World Cup, but now we have to prepare for tougher teams ahead. We still have some problems but we didn't make any big mistakes," said Hiddink.

Italian-based Ahn escaped the coach's criticism this time because he came on as a second half substitute to score two brilliant goals.
