It was mid-January early this year, when Shaon, a second year student of the physics department of Dhaka University, was first detected with blood cancer. He was immediately sent to Kolkata where medical specialists confirmed the test reports of Dhaka. Doctors advised of bone-marrow transplantation within next six months which would possibly save the young man's life. As told by local and Indian cancer specialists, an estimated expenditure of taka 45 to 50 lacs would be required for the complicated surgery and a Singapore hospital was the best place for such treatment. Being a child of a middle-class family, Shawon is unable to acquire such a huge amount all by himself. Taka 7 to 8 lacs have so far been collected for Shawon's treatment from various sources of charity.

It may be mentioned that recently Shawon's friends and students of physics department of Dhaka University arranged a film show session that lasted for four days and the entire amount received from sales' proceed-
