paid only Tk 50,000 each. "Most of us refused to sign the papers after reading those. But the agents threatened that our visas would be cancelled if we do not sign", said Mozammel of Comilla.

During recruitment, the agents had assured them of job security, fixed working hours, free food, lodging and treatment facilities to be provided by the garment factories.

"We all had to sign the paper because we needed the jobs for which we paid huge amounts of money," said Rashedul Haider. "Reaching the factory (at Brunai), we were amazed seeing the conditions", he said. Mizanur Rahman alleged that torture followed if any one demanded payments for extra eight hours' work. Some of them were even given electric shock by hired goons of factory owners, he alleged.

The working conditions in factories were unhealthy. Bangladeshi workers were not allowed to go outside the factory premises and were not provided with minimum facilities like toilet facilities and fan. At times, even drinking water was not supplied. Many of them became sick within a few days but they were not given treatment facility by factory owners, they alleged.

The Bangladesh embassy in Brunei was informed of the situation but the officials failed to do anything.

Exhausted, Kamal Hossain of Telikhali village under Bhandaria thana in Pirojpur was lying on the grass. "I went there (Brunai) to earn for myself and my family. I have nothing now", he said.

Kamal went to Brunei in September last year and worked there as a sewer.

Whether Bush would lay out a specific timetable for an independent state of Palestine was a subject of discussion at high levels at the White House and abroad.

Saudi Crown Prince Abdullah. who spoke to Bush by phone on Sunday, said on Monday a timetable was needed for the creation of a Palestinian state and that he hoped it would be realised by the end of Bush's first term, which expires in January 2005.

Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, who met Bush at the White House a week ago, said on Sunday that "the conditions are not ripe" for the establishment of any kind of Palestinian state.

Bush said last week after talks with the Saudi foreign minister that he intended to lay out "a vision that will help lead toward two states living side-by-side.

The RSF in its report condemns any incitement to violence by the media. It also condemns the occasionally virulent way in which some media with close ties with the government negatively comment on those publications that peaceably criticise the authorities. The RSF condemns the support

Before deciding on gas export the government should consider the current low reserves, demand and supply forecast, gas supply provision under production sharing contracts (PSCs) and their impact and 'low gains' from export.
