Infiltration of Islamic militants into Indian-Kashmir is at the heart of the current stand-off between the two nuclear-armed South Asian rivals, which has seen both sides mobilise about one million troops on their common borders, edging to the brink of war late last month.

> India earlier this month lifted a ban on Pakistani flights into India imposed after the parliament attack, acknowledging that fewer Islamic rebels were crossing into its zone of Kashmir from Pakistani territory.

It also recalled its warships from forward attack positions off Pakistan and announced it was appointing a new high commissioner (ambassador) to Islamabad.

Pakistan has said the measures are not substantive enough and has demanded that India begins withdrawing troops from the international border and the Line of Control (LoC), the de facto border separating the two countries in disputed Kashmir.

Meanwhile, an officer of India's paramilitary Border Security Force (BSF) and a suspected Pakistani intruder have been killed in an exchange of fire between border guards in India's desert state of Rajasthan, a police official Wednesday.

The incident occurred Tuesday evening in Raisinghnagar area, 450 kilometres (280 miles) from here, when BSF troops patrolling the international border chanced upon an intruder trying to enter Indian territory from Pakistan, the official said.

While the BSF officials were questioning the intruder, Pakistani Rangers opened fire killing the officer, assistant commandant Sumer Singh.

The BSF troops stationed along the border retaliated and the exchange of fire continued for about four hours, the source added

NC elects Deuba party president

AFP, Kathmandu

Nepal's ruling party Wednesday elected caretaker prime minister Sher Bahadur Deuba its new president but his victory failed to erase deep divisions within the strife-torn organisation.

A national convention of the Nepali Congress (NC) held in Kathmandu elected Deuba uncontested, officials said

On Tuesday the NC threw out the former president Girija Prasad Koirala, after he expelled Deuba from the party last month for three years in protest at his recommendation to King Gvanendra to dissolve parliament and call early elections.

The convention also overturned the expulsion order on 56-year-old Deuba.

"We had been looking for a strong leader and are happy to say he has been chosen."

Koirala has made no public comment on his remova as party president, but had earlier said the convention which was called by Deuba, was "illegal" because it was called by an expelled member of the party.

Shortly after Deuba's election, Minister for Agriculture and Co-operatives Mahesh Acharya resigned from his post because of the divisions in the party.

"Despite tireless efforts to save my party from breaking, it finally split into two factions. This sad event has stunned me and thousands of the other party activists like myself." he said "This event has gravely affected the country's paramount democratic party. My time and efforts from now on will be devoted to forging unity in the party and reforming its style of functions.

Australia under fire for backing US 'strike-first' policy

AFP, Sydney

The Australian government faced mounting opposition Wednesday to its endorsement of Washington's strategic policy of striking first against countries supporting terrorist attacks.

In a speech to senior military staff in Canberra on Tuesday, Defence Minister Robert Hill announced Australia was prepared to be the first country to support the "strikefirst threat" announced by US President George W. Bush this month.

"The need to act swiftly and firmly before threats become attacks is perhaps the clearest lesson of September 11, and is one that is clearly driving US policy and strategy," Hill said

Indian Kashmir's main separatist alliance on Wednesday asked that its leaders be allowed to visit Pakistani territory to negotiate a ceasefire to help resolve the half-century dispute over the Himalayan province.

Abdul Gani Bhat, the chairman of the All Party Hurriyat Conference, said members of the alliance wanted to travel to the third of Kashmir administered by Pakistan to meet with leaders of the "mujahedin," or Islamic warriors.

"We will negotiate peace with them and a peaceful resolution to the dispute of Jammu and Kashmir, Bhat told reporters in Srinagar, Indian request India denied

Colombo-LTTE to monitor pullout from temples

AFP, Colombo

The Sri Lankan government and Tamil Tiger rebels have agreed to set up a panel to monitor the withdrawal of troops from temples in line with a Norwegian-backed truce, officials here said Wednesday.

The rebel Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) and a government representative Tuesday decided to establish a joint team that will also include members of the Scandinavian body which is monitoring a truce between the two sides

The military announced last month they had vacated temples and churches in the embattled northern and eastern regions except for three Buddhist temples where priests had wanted the military to remain.

However, the LTTE had complained that police and paramilitary units were still occupying places of religious worship, mainly in the eastern province, in violation of the ceasefire deal that went into effect from February 23.

Officials involved in the negotiations with the LTTE said they agreed to set up the panel so that truce monitors can "ascertain the position.'

The decision was taken at the second round of informal face-toface talks between the LTTE and a government delegation in the rebelheld town of Kilinochchi in the north of the island on Tuesday.

The head of the government's "peace secretariat" coordinating the Norwegian-sponsored peace bid, Bernard Gunatilleke, held two hours of talks with Tiger leaders.

Tiger radio said Gunatilleke, who flew into the rebel-held area in a military helicopter, was accompanied by two colleagues and a Norwegian diplomat.
