

Make reform a reality: WB

BSS, Dhaka

The World Bank has said that the future welfare of Bangladesh depends on the leaders having the courage to bring about genuine reform and long term vision.

The World Bank in a recent report lauded some of Bangladesh's achievements and observed that the new government has both a historic opportunity and a heavy responsibility to implement solid measures to make reform a reality.

search, and the public consultations have all been done and re-done. Now is the moment to act," said the report commending some of the country's achievements since 1975.

Bangladesh, the report said, is a country of paradoxes and it is located in a region ravaged by natural disasters - frequent floods, cyclones, tornadoes and even droughts - and yet it has achieved a sustained improvement in agricultural production to the point where it is practically self-sufficient in food.

"And perhaps most surprising of all, despite severe governance problem, it has succeeded in steadily improving per capita income and most of the basic measures of welfare. Since 1975, life expectancy has risen 12 years, child mortality has fallen by 30 per cent, fertility has halved, primary school enrolment has doubled to over 90 per cent and now there are almost as many girls going to school as boys," the report commended.
