people by their initiatives on human tissue banking and engineering. Welcoming the participants and guests BAEC acting chairman Prof Dr Naiyym Choudhury explained the research and development activities of tissue banking in BAEC. He said the successful operation of a tissue bank is only possible when people will be aware of tissue donation and donate parts of their body.

Karar Mahmudul Hassan said tissue banking issue is a very important and welfare oriented subject and it requires coordinated efforts of the group who process tissue allografts, and users. But the successful operation of a tissue bank is only possible when public could be aware of the importance of this subject in totality and scope of tissue donation by the concerned people agency clinics.

In health services, it is not the quantity but the quality of medical product, which is the important criterion to be taken into consideration, he said.

The theme of workshop is "I believe". Prof Naiyym said tissue allografts, being a medical product of biological (human) origin, require to be safe and clinically acceptable. That is why quality control of the product is essential. The tissue bankers could accumulate knowledge by exchanging their own experiences among themselves as well as by learning new ideas innovated by the masters of the field, he added.
