FAYZA HAQ

BIPASHA Hayat and Biplob Saha's recent joint exhibit at the Zainul Gallery showed styles and themes of the young artists which were quite admirable for their quality and range of work.

Bipasha's "Women with sunflower" in pastel and acrylic on paper has the faces and partial figures of two women in a sunflower field. The faces of the women are beautiful with doe eyes, thin noses and Cupid's bow lips. Their flying hair is suggested. While the upper section of their bodies are sketched out. The rest of the paper is taken up by the yellow petals of the sunflowers with their thick stems and green centres. A lot of the picture is in shades of brown, green and yellow. Her "Family" is a collection of brown and black squares that contain houses, a crescent moon, a flower, a petal, a house and faces of members of a family which are sketched in pastel and acrylic. The women in the collection have long curly, falling hair and simple lines to denote eyes, nose and mouths. Where the elements of nature come in they too are quick sketches with a background of burnt sienna, yellow and orange. Simple as are the creations yet they are attractive. The images are surrounded by a square of muted gray.

Bipasha's "Couple", in pastel and acrylic on paper, bring in two figures, that of a man and a woman. This is done by red strokes on a yellow background that is offset by blue and black. Dark outlines are used to give depth to the lines that form the features of the face and the folds of the hair. While the woman has large eyes and thick curled lips the man is handsome, with regular features. Her

"Loneliness", pastel and acrylic on paper, brings in the sketch of a woman in blue and purple, with her tresses falling to her hips. Her blue appearance is offset by her crimson sari and her necklace of gold baubles. She stands against a dark background on which there are rows of pink circles floating in a shaft of yellow and green. The dark colours used, specially the gray and black stress the theme of loneliness. A woman holding on to a golden fish in "The only happiness", also in pastel and acrylic on paper, present the features of a delectable woman with an elongated neck and long nose set off by long eye lashes and gently falling hair waving around her face. This woman done purely in blue holds on to a yellow and red rounded fish. Scratches on both sides of the paper frames the face.

Bipasha Hayat has taken part in more than a dozen joint ventures such as Nine Contemporary Young Artists' Miniature, Five Contemporary Women's Exhibition and all the annual exhibitions of the Institute of Fine Arts. At present she is doing her MFA in Drawing and Painting from the Institute of Fine Arts, DU.

Biplob Saha's "After the rain" brings in the scene of a clean pavement surrounded walls, trees and poles. At one side, against the expanse of blue, is a red broken wheel. The pavement is blue gray and touched with sheets of white. While tree trunks appear in dark blue on the canvas, pale indigo blue brings in the background of houses in the distance. "Moonlit night," in mixed media, brings in another idyllic scene which has a wash of fancy and imagination over the stark reality. Here we see aspects of walls of houses along with their staircases, balconies and lights. This too is done in dark blue highlighted by yellow and squares of jade green.

In Biplob's "Darkness" we see dilapidated houses, as seen at night, with their red roof and clothes lines along with doors, windows and people going about their work. At first the painting appears to be a maze of squares and rectangles in shades of blue touched with red and yellow. His "1928" brings in more such images of houses with their doors and windows seen against trunks of trees with an array of falling bricks in front, done in shades of gold and brown. The sky above is in variations of gray blue, white and beige. Biplob's "Art on the wall" shows impressionistic image of a wall with scenes of flowers, clouds, tree trunks and bottles arranged on shelves. This is in green, brown, mauve and yellow, with touches of white.

Biplob Saha is an MFA student at the Department of Drawing and Painting at the Institute of Fine Arts, DU. He has participated in over 15 joint ventures including the Fifth Burger Young Artists' Exhibition, Second Tone International Miniature Art Exhibition and the Tenth Young Artists' Art Exhibition.

Both the young artists had persevered to bring new images and themes before the viewers.
