travel to Japan in hope of finding inner peace in a Buddhist monastery. Initially, things go wrong in Tokyo but the two manage to make their way to the Monzen monastery and discover their intended psychological aspiration. A gentle, spontaneous comedy without esoteric fashion trends on discovery of alternative lifestyles was the plot of a German video film, 'Enlightenment guaranteed' that was screened at the auditorium of the Goethe-Institut at Dhanmondi, as part of the inaugural ceremony, on September 23, of a weeklong film festival titled, 'German Film Week and Focus on Switzerland' jointly arranged by the embassies of Germany and Switzerland in Dhaka and the Goethe-Institut.

during an exhibition of automaton at the at the Le Lode watch-making museum. An imaginary nocturnal party has been the pretext for presenting the most beautiful automatons. The products of extreme ingenuity are often been placed in wrist watches. The film made them live players and dancers. As dawn arrived, the fairy tale-like robots stopped playing and returned to their motionless, dead entity.

'Nach dem Fall' (After the fall), an 86-minute colour production on uled for screening on September 26 that talked on the disappearance of the Berlin Wall. Contemporary witnesses included an American historian, a church minister in Berlin and a Bavarian demolition expert. The common tenor of all their statements has been that the Wall and its traces were eradicated too guickly and too radically with an intention of erasing memories of the past.

HBO: 11:45 p.m. The Hard Way. What do they have in common? Absolutely nothing, but Lang wants to break away from his image and play a tough cop. His role model, Moss of course. When Moss is ordered to baby-sit Lang so the actor can prepare for his part, he is very ticked-off indeed. But together they forge an unlikely partnership to hunt down a serial killer.
