Rabeya Begum Lipi's solo painting exhibit at the Zainul Gallery focuses on women, society and nature

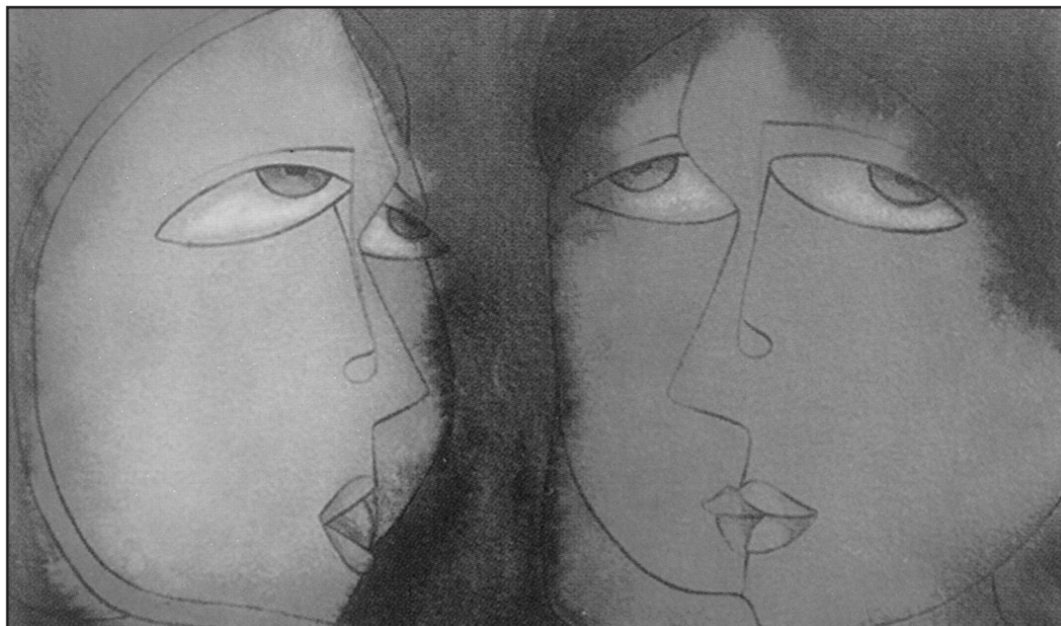

SAIFUL ISLAM

AT the last step the rise of new sun can be seen, the whole view is through a doorway; the entrance to the stairways is barred, a shackle and a lock hangs obstructing any forward movement. This obstruction is one of the major themes of the paintings of Rabeya Begum Lipi. Her first solo exhibition titled 'Obstructed Image' is going on at the Zainul Gallery in the Fine Arts Institute of the University of Dhaka.

Lipi's study of humane feeling is expressed through her deft works on flowers, and various parts of a flower; seeds, petals, floating pollen dust, stamen and pistil. A large part of her works are on flowers and the colours splashed over them seem to find their place on the canvasses out of a painter's whims, though the depth of feelings and emotion that brings about these colours can be seen in her works. 'Abstract works were the fruit of my first steps as a painter. In my recent paintings show slightly deformed shapes of faces', added Lipi; the distortion present in some of her works seems to be experimental.

The representation of women in her works is also experimental. Solitary and lonesome faces and shapes of women are always there. But here she has been able to become more liberated and imaginative. This bearing of the artist's mind stands in opposition to the contemporary socio-political scene, as the empowerment of women has only become a virtual reality, they are oppressed, their voices are repressed their freedom of choice is suppressed in one form or other, everywhere. 'Perhaps in my subconscious I was always aware of what's happening around'. The monster like shapes are titled 'Conspiracy', it was painted recently in a silent protest to what happened in a woman's dormitory in the University of Dhaka recently.

'The sad departures of Trisha, Simi are always in my mind, but we can do nothing else, we can just look at what's happening around, and we do nothing. People have noticed that I have depicted the trunks of trees.' In the paintings titled 'Insecure', 'Intuition', we can see the silent forms of tree-trunks standing as if pestilence stricken, shivering, and slightly disfigured. The use of colours in these cases are pensive, there is an insidious halo of light hanging over them. A shady darkness impending; throughout the whole canvass this sort of liquid darkness is created to show the pointlessness of keeping silence; because it will only increase the darkness and will bar the moments of light that emblematises freedom and healthy society. Her 'Oppressed' ignites these interpretations.

There is not a single painting, all of them in watercolour, that features

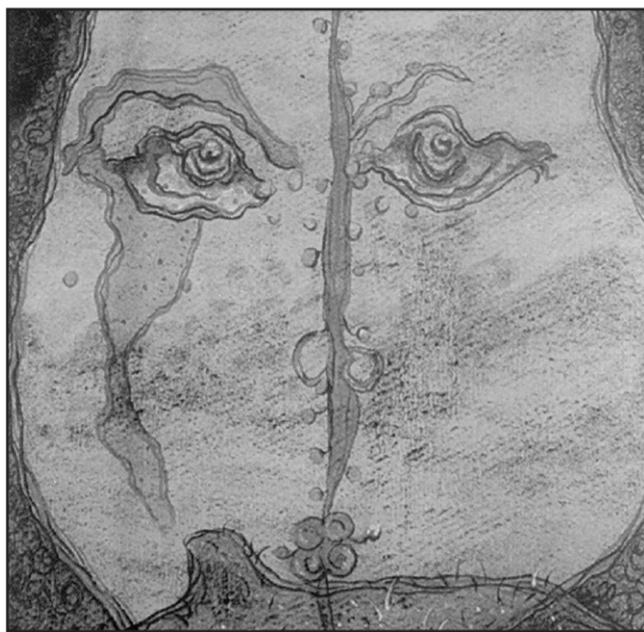

Intuition - 15"x26"

a man. In many of her works the study of the various mood of women can be seen. Caprice, depression, and waiting are subjects of some of her works. In some paintings; such as 'Lady with star' and 'Swing with the moon', the day dreaming women is present. In places it seems that the stars of the sky have swum over the sari of the melancholic women sitting alone. As if the night sky has blended herself with her, in these cases a fragrance of fairytale can be sensed. Paintings like 'Cycle' and 'Unknown flower' focus on the beautiful sights of nature. 'I am obsessed with the sunflower, I worked a lot with it' added Lipi.

The exhibition will end on October 22, 2002.
