Exhibition

An emotional world of colour, beauty and impression

Artist Rebeka Sultana displays her works at an exhibition in the city

AZIZ AMIRUL

SPLASHES and specks, patterns and blocks in shades of yellow, blue, red, orange and white reign all across the gallery in works of oil and acrylic, those of Rebeka Sultana, a post-graduate of the Institute of Fine Arts of Dhaka University who currently holds her first solo exhibition in the institute's Zainul Gallery in the city.

Female portraits, figures and forms muster among the 30-plus compositions. Entitled 'My emotion my world', the display contains works of art those, in majority, represent the inner psyche and moral values, perceptions and dreams of the female community of this region of the world.

As Rebeka says, her works are often too simple and realistic yet the themes attempt to provide a feeling of deep psychological trance to the viewer with ingredients of bright colour, bits and pieces of pasted wrinkled paper, raised portions and besides everything, with a notion of intense simplicity throughout the entire composition. 'I like to create situations with added imageries and subjects in my works', she says. As Rebeka feels, there remains a wide scope for experimentation when fresh thoughts and ideas are implemented upon semi-realistic creations.

Rebeka Sultana's women possess mixed characteristic qualities of shyness, boldness, fun, sorrow, love, caring and wisdom yet most of all reach a common point in life where lies strict and rigorous discipline, social obligation and decree, all of which are immensely difficult to avoid.

A number of titled works, those under common series, like 'Rhythm of Life' and 'Waiting' portray contemporary circumstances faced by women in the society, one which is loaded with superstition, backwardness, religious outcry, moral dilemma and other shortcomings imposed by the possessive and dominating, often oppressive and exploitative male subjects.

'Wall', a dense and rich yellow-

based composition, could be interpreted as a symbolic obstruction faced by the female community and the shade of yellow, in this case, comes up to speak of all kinds of social irregularities, provision and enrichment of ill-elements, all of which, once again, join hands to act against the freedom and liberty of the feminine character.

Nature too, turns out to be a favourite subject of Rebeka. The artist composes bird forms with embellishment of a wide variety of shades and with designs in thickly multi-coloured outline frames on canvas. 'I make an attempt to draw my birds in a different way and to give the subjects an entirely separate dimensional quality'. A subconscious element of the subdued female mind, if seen from a different angle, might even exist in the bird-form of the artist that is a suppressed desire to fly-off, hence receive an ultimate freedom from the torturous and threatening bondage of the male domination.

Bird

Nature's beauty reveals more in works like 'Moon Night', 'Patabahar', 'Flower in a vase' and 'Flower', through subtle romantic appeal and through a combination of fantasy, desire and suppressed emotional agony of the female soul.

'Alone' depicts a girl who stays within her very own psychic arena and flirts with time and space to express her untold pangs and objections towards the harsh society.

Another work that reflects some important expressions of Rebeka's characters appears before the viewer with a title, 'Motion'. Colours in deep shades seep and trickle down the surface as the artist implements 'wash procedure' in her composition. The female figure looks upward and seems to burst in silence with some unknown twinge in her heart. A feeling of guilt creeps upon the viewers' mind as one closely observes the work.

Yet of all, the better work of art to some is the one captioned, 'Festival'. A sense of pleasure and gaiety fills up the viewers' wit as the cherry red background presents quite a contrastingly shaded peacock, one in milky white and drab navy blue. 'When I look at this work, my mind returns back to the gleeful teen years. One reminisces the good old days, those of the festive seasons when, with friends, all used to enjoy the colours and flavours of life', says the artist while elaborating on the particular exhibit.

Dr. Farida Zaman, a professor and Head of the Department of Drawing and Painting of the Fine Arts Institute, while expressing her thoughts on the works of Rebeka Sultana, praises of the artist's in-depth psychic analyses of the female subjects and also mentions that the displayed works would, perhaps, open up fresh doorways in the common mind to think about, in a new way, of plights and pangs, contribution and unexplored thoughts of the women of our society.

The exhibition is open to all from 11:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. everyday till November 7.

Conference

In celebration of lore and folk

Bangladesh Folklore society organises 6th International Folklore conference 2002

SAIFUL ISLAM

A notable gathering of folklore lovers could be seen on both the days of the two-day long 6th International Folklore Conference 2002 organised by the Bangladesh Folklore Society. The opening day conference was held at the ICMAB Auditorium, Nilkhet, Dhaka, on November 1, 2002. The second day's conference, on November 2 was held far from the madding crowd of the capital city, at Tepantor, Bhaluka in Mymensingh. The core theme of the conference was 'The Study of Folklore in the Modern World'.

Professor Mazharul Islam in his paper, 'The Study of Folklore in the Modern World' presented an elaborate discussion on the beginning of the human civilization and the awakening of the creative urge in men and women. He also suggested that 'folklorists are very much indebted to the scholars of many academic disciplines, such as historians, literary critics, anthropologists, linguists' and social scientists. The study of folklore gradually has been set to scientific approach. He also added that a modern day folklorist cannot avoid the understanding of the genres of folklore through structural analysis. Another important aspect of the paper was that where Professor Mazharul Islam pointed to the importance of the aesthetic elements that can be found in the subject of analysis, because 'the aesthetic sense of creative man found their expression' in the treasured aspects of folklore.

The second day of the 6th International Folklore Conference was held, so to say, on the lap of nature. The first session was held in Shalbon. The delegates and people interested in folklore were taken to the rural setting by bus in the morning. A large number of scholars and thinkers congregated at the conference, though the small number of scholars from abroad did not please the President of the Bangladesh Folklore Society professor Mazharul Islam. The reception committee, which included a number of scholars worked hard to contact the notable scholars in other countries. Professor Mazharul Islam, just before his presidential address, regretted the fact that the letters sent to those scholars, by the postal division of Bangladesh, took more than one month to reach their destination. A short cultural function was organised on the second day, at Tepantor, in Bhaluka, in Mymensingh, of the conference before announcing the end to the 6th International Folklore Conference 2002.

Dr. Joshi, from Nepal, in his address at the first day of the conference in Dhaka, expressed his hope that one day the celebration of tradition and indigenous cultures will bring the world together. Globalization, so to say, is uprooting indigenous cultures that men have treasured for long. But it can be easily understood that this process, if it goes on, will alienate people. Exchange of views and culture on the other hand is a way to add more and enrich the hitherto rich treasure, that is folklore. Folklore is a pure and pristine treasure that belongs to many races and communities of the world. And a conference like this will surely help folklore to find a solid ground in the world where it can stand and enlighten the new generations that encounter a dynamic and changing world everyday.
