

DHAKA FRIDAY NOVEMBER 8. 2002

Republicans gain control of Congress

Bush's hands strengthened

EORGE W. Bush won the November, 2000 US Presidential Election against his Democrat opponent El-Gore by a wafer-thin margin in popular vote. To top it off, the opposition Democrats were in control of the Senate. Most people thought Bush would need a good deal of bipartisan luck to push his legislative measures through.

After last Tuesday's mid-term elections, the Republican-Democrat equations in the legislature have changed. The congressional balance has tipped in favour of George Bush. The Republicans have wrested control of the Senate from the opposition Democrats and added to their majority in the House of Representatives. With 51-seat majority in the Senate and 226 seats in the House -- eight more than 218 needed to control the body -- the Republicans have seized full control of the Congress. The critical Republican dependence on Vice-President Dick Cheney's tie-breaking vote in the powerful Senate is a matter of past now.

However, the Republican's 27-21 edge in state governorships seems in for a reversal with key gains obtained by the Democrats in the large states of Pennsylvania, Illinois and Michigan among the 36 gubernatorial positions up for grabs.

In the US electoral history seldom has a party in power fared well in mid-term polls. In fact, the party in White House invariably lost seats in the House of Representatives. Only thrice has this trend been broken over the last 142 years since 1860: in 1934 during Roosevelt's time; in 1998 during the Clinton presidency; and now George Bush does it.

Bush has made history by increasing the Republican strength in the House from incumbency. And, regaining control of the Senate was a clear prize for him.

Prize for what? Many Democrat senators thought his effective campaign and two-year leadership track-record ensured a good Republican showing at the polls. Bush's detractors, however, ascribe the success to massive campaign spendings.

In the run-up to polls, Republican reference to Iraq was muted. It had to be. The US public being chary of war prospects looming large, the ruling party campaigners kept a low profile on this issue. But the Democrats failed to cash in on it. On the contrary, Bush kept riding the wave of patriotism and support 'unleashed by the September 11 attacks.'

In a scenario where the 'people were left in the mood of wanting to support the president,' the Republicans simply failed to get their messages across. The issues they needed to articulate most -- economy, education and healthcare -- were relegated into the background.

As a matter of fact, hardly any distinction could be made between the Democrats and Republicans on

October that was

HASNAT ABDUL HYE

the continuing rumble of war mongering over Iraq. Grisly deaths in acts of terrorism and counterterrorism hogged the headlines.

Economic slowdown spread unease and fear among the vulnerable. Arguably, there was very little to cheer about and celebrate. The only event in October that could be cause for rejoicing and fond remembrance was forgotten as in the past galls like failure.

CTOBER came and was over in due course. It was not uneventful. There was revolution that socialist and Marxist had waited from the second quarter of the last century. It was to be a prelude, the backdrop, to a social and political revolution marking the triumph of historic class struggle. It should be admitted that many of the promises were fulfilled following October Revolution. Russia was transformed into a modern industrial economy through the introduction of five-year plans and use of "primitive capital accumulation" The vestiges of feudalism were history.

rapid strides. Many third world countries got active support in their struggle to throw off colonial rule. Even developed capitalist countries adopted the welfare state model taking lessons from the Russian experience Organizations of socialist countries in East Europe were formed for defence and economic cooperation within the communist block. During the cold war, from the end of the Second World War to the collapse of communism in East Europe in 1989 state. Orwell's Big Brother and Kafka's Joseph K became representative figures of the system located as opposites. Human rights violation and lack of freedom of speech were brought into sharp focus by the prison camps in Gulags. It has been said in mitigation of these aberrations that internal and external threat faced by Russia from the vary inception left it with no other option than the use of repressive state machinery. For this inhumane face, the capitalist west nism. has always been utopian. It was a distant land, another moral universe. It was radically 'other' visa-vis the order of things it aspired to replace. A society without exploitation is in the realm of the ideal. Far from being an inevitability, an exploitation free society where proletariats rule, is an unsolved problem. Referring to some of their predecessors Marx and Engels pointed out that faced with a proletarian class not yet sufficiently developed and faced likewise with not to speak of luxury items. The long queues of senior citizens, mostly Babushkas, waiting in snowdrift for bread or potato and empty shelves became the enduring images of the communist state, loved by its detractors. In defence it has been pointed out that without depriving consumers, rapid industrialization and the development of Soviet defence capable of matching the capitalist west would not have been possible. For the arms race that absorbed a hefty slice of national investment the west's policy of confrontation should also be blamed, the supporters emphasize

One does not have to be a diehard communist to proclaim that compared to the failures, successes and achievements of the October Revolution weigh heavier. But this did not prevent communist Russia from imploding. The secret behind the demise of Soviet Russia still remains an enigma. A convincing and comprehensive analysis of this spectacular collapse without a shot being fired from outside is yet to be made. Appreciation of the results of October revolution does not have to wait for this. It should be remembered for the various spectacular achievements and glorious traditions established even if it is now nothing more than history. But if Francis Fukuyama's grand vision of 'end of history' is an apocalyptic view, as the French philosopher Derrida has rightly pointed out, socialism may not have breathed its last. As social democracies in Europe after the Second World War showed, there are different forms of socialism and different ways of attaining it. Collapse of communism in no way diminishes the appeal and necessity of an egalitarian social order. As long as that remains true, and it will till kingdom come, October Revolution will have lessons for the future. It should be remembered.

seen starkly in the deprivation of the consumers from essential goods, material conditions that were still insufficient for the emancipation of the proletariat, these thinkers could only invent in place of what they lacked. So they invented 'fantastic pictures of future society' i.e. utopia.

Marx, in particular, did not believe in ready-made utopias for the working class. They must pass through long process of struggle which would transform circumstances and men, he wrote. His resistance to any blueprint kept Marx from addressing what kind of institutional structures socialist democracy would require.

His declaration to the effect that when class distinctions disappear, political conflict would also be over.

was seen as a rationalization for the permanent dictatorship of an elite. It was apprehended that members of this elite, the party apparatchiks, would continue to rule indefinitely in convincing and comprehensive analysis of this spectacular collapse without a shot being fired from outside is yet to be made. Appreciation of the results of October revolution does not have to wait for this. It should be remembered for the various spectacular achievements and glorious traditions established even if it is now nothing more than

IN MY VIEW

Compared to the failures, successes and achievements of the October Revolution weigh heavier. But this did not prevent communist Russia from imploding. The secret behind the demise of Soviet Russia still remains an enigma. A decade. Like the colonel in abolished through collectivization, Marquez's story, no one writes albeit at a high cost of human lives about October Revolution any and temporary loss of productions. more, far less glorify it with pride. Workers became disciplined and The October revolution in Russia developed skills under ideological has been thrown in the ash heap of inspirations, like the Stakhanovite history, it would seem. There is movement. They enjoyed facilities handwringing and wincing among provided by the state from cradle to its former champions at the very grave. Art, culture and sports flourmention of the name. It is brushed ished with participation by men and aside either as an embarrassment women from all walks of life. Women or a nightmare. If nothing succeeds were emancipated and enjoyed like success, nothing grates and equal rights, both at home and outdoors. The picture of women But October revolution is not driving tractors became a popular about failure in the absolute. The icon throughout the world. Ecogreat socialist project conceived in nomic development and skilled Europe in the nineteenth century manpower helped Russia to break was given concrete shape by the the back of Hitler's war machine in a historic change that took place on prolonged war. After the war, scienthe seventeenth October in Russia. tific and industrial advancement It ushered in the first communist made quantum leaps as Russia became a nuclear power and was the first country to send a satellite in outer space. Along with national development under the communist party, international cooperation with socialist and other countries made

Russia maintained balance of power with the capitalist west and thus promoted world peace. The vacuum created by the collapse of Soviet Russia has now given rise to a uni-polar world where the only superpower now feels no restraint on its policies. Many third world countries benefited from Soviet help and cooperation for a long time which contributed greatly to their development. Without Russian help the success of Bangladesh's liberation war would have been problematic. This is a long list of spectacular achievements and historic successes. It seemed that October revolution delivered more than it had promised. But the down side of the revolution was no less striking. though not immediately perceptible. Ultimately, it was under the weight of the failures that communism in Russia collapsed. Or did it? Both during and following October revolution the toll of human lives was high. Stalin's reign of terror came to epitomize the communist bears responsibility in no small degree. Whether this attenuates the record of human rights violation significantly is a different matter.

The most outstanding failure of communist Russia was with regard to the establishment of 'the dictatorship of proletariat'. The leaders of the Party and party apparatchiks remained in command from the biginning to the end. State, far from withering away, expanded in scope and power with two distinct classes of rulers and the ruled. The only distinction was that the former belonged to the communist party and not to an elite class and there was no private ownership of means of production. Power was monopolized and exercised mostly for selfaggrandizement and gratification of greed of the individual or the group in power. The 'communist man' did not materialize at the top.

the name of workers, which they But greed for power and money eventually did may not be the whole explanation. As a goal, socialism and its most influential version, Marxist commu-

Hasnat Abdul Hye is a former secretary, novelist and economist.

October revolution's failure is

Children of perdition

that he has a right not only to be right but also to be wrong." There is no doubt that these boys knew that what they were going to do was wrong, and they exercised that right. For us, the good news is our children are growing up fast.

One could even try to understand if the boys had killed that teacher with their own hands. Children like adults can be overwhelmed with rage at times and commit crimes on the spur of the moment. But these be ignited by the spark of a rude comment, one push, one simple altercation. We don't know if in future we should be able to ask our children to brush their teeth, go to school or learn good table manners without risking some kind of wrath or retaliation The boys have fessed up to their offense under police interrogation. They have told why and how they snuffed out the light of a man's life that was stored inside each of them? Was it some kind of a phenomenon waiting to happen? What do we call it -- Muslim kishmet, Christian fatum or Hindu karma?

There is a rare concenital abnormality named progeria characterized by premature and rapid aging, the afflicted individual appearing in childhood as an aged person. Are our children afflicted with this ailment, their minds burning out at a speed that defies the growth of their hardened criminals engaged in the killing trade. May be the teacher didn't realize that his students were in a hurry to grow up, that they were in a rush to exceed their place in life and be somewhere. So they failed the tests because while their bodies were in the classroom, their minds were elsewhere.

> Still no matter how one looks at it, it sounds so pathetic. It sounds like our children are competing with us, money or a revolver without anybody in their houses missing what was lost? It seems nobody was watching them, and then it should not come as surprise if those boys had grown up in their own imagination

Which they did and they wanted to deal with the world in their own rights. It is somewhat sad that those boys had to be their own adults, decide their own course of action and live with the consequences of that action. Yet they are so young and naï ve. so unaccustomed to the ways of life, so inexperienced of the realities of the world! Perhaps nobody ever told them that the fruits of patience and tolerance were sweeter than vengeance. Perhaps they had felt the rush in them to grow up, and couldn't wait to conquer an enemy without taking his Ben Johnson was an English playwright, who wrote that the children of perdition are often made instruments even of the greatest works. These two boys who are responsible for the murder of their teacher, will become adults one day to realize that they hadn't grown up earlier. Meanwhile, the adults need to understand that they are being . life.

watched.

WO seventh graders of Government Laboratory School have been arrested in connection with the murder of their English teacher. They, of course, didn't pull the trigger of the gun, which was fired to kill the poor man. They hired professional killers to do the job, and supplied the revolver, which was used for the murder. If you look at the sunny side of this horrible incident, our children are finally thinking like adults. So they planned to eliminate what stood in their way and conspired to kill their teacher with a gang of killers. They chose the easy way out, instead of facing the challenge of passing the English test next year. or learning from mistakes when the teacher rebuked to discipline them. They chose to have him murdered. There is a twist of irony in this tragedy though. The students who couldn't learn their lessons in the classroom went ahead to teach a lesson to their teacher. The Hungarian-born psychiatrist Thomas Szasz writes in Childhood. " A child the question of their preoccupation with national security concerns. This was basically erased when a bipartisan resolution was adopted to firmly back Bush on his Iraq policy.

Bush's new-found strength in both the houses of Congress will give him a free hand to pursue his conservative agenda, domestic as well as international

He will try to bolster 'a floundering economy' through a demanding tax regimen.

He seems set to pursue his hard-line policy on Iraq with redoubled energy. That is where the impact of his mid-term electoral showing is likely to be the most pronounced. At the campaign stages, the stance on leadership change in Iraq was softened a bit by asking for iron-clad guarantees on disarmament from Saddam.

Bush may put greater pressure on the UNSC to get a tough resolution against Iraq now.

But Bush knows whatever he does in Iraq will have an impact on the next presidential elections. Those hustings are not too far away.

CROSS TALK

It is somewhat sad that those boys had to be their own adults, decide their own course of action and live with the consequences of that action. Yet they are so young and naïve, so unaccustomed to the ways of life, so inexperienced of the realities of the world! Perhaps nobody ever told them that the fruits of patience and tolerance were sweeter than vengeance. Perhaps they had felt the rush in them to grow up, and couldn't wait to conquer an enemy without taking his life.

boys planned the murder in cold blood, negotiated contract with a notorious gang, stole money from the house to bankroll the contract, and handed in to killers the revolver, which belonged to the father of one of the two boys. All that time they were thinking of revenge, of teaching a lesson to the man who had dared to expel one of them from the exam hall, give a failing grade to the other and chide them both for mischief

Which tells us that we are living in a dangerous world, where we don't know who is on the brink of his mind, becomes an adult when he realizes who is waiting like an explosive to for doing his job. But they will never be able to tell us where they learned to seek revenge at an age, when they should have played marbles, collected stamps or flown kites. They will never be able to tell us how of retribution at the tender age. when the only disappointment in life should have been the pimples on their face.

We will never know how it all started, the chaos in the Torrid Zone of their cerebral cortex, the cataclysm, the sordid rage, the violence that swept their hearts with deadly instincts. How did it happen? Was it the revival of some genetic memory bodies? Those two boys must be already learning that another shot at the English test would have been much easier than the hell behind the bars they are currently living.

There is a loss of gravity in either case, when the space of maturity contracts or expands in the temporal conflicts of mind and body.

That must be why the two boys followed by formative minds that are used to hang around with older curious to know. How could the two boys, those who were already boys have stolen a hefty sum of students with teachers and children with parents. There is already a loss of respect for us in their eyes. Gone are the days of obedience and shyness. Gone are the days when the sight of an elderly person sent fear into the hearts of children, when children abstained from mischief because an adult was they are also being watched by children, that when they bring home a bundle of cash or stash away a revolver in the house they are being

May be that is one great thing that will come out of this deplorable matter. After all, it is as important, if not more, for adults to produce sound children as it is for children to produce sound adults

Mohammad Badrul Ahsan is a banker.

Nuclear puzzle complicates Japan-North Korea normalisation talks

MONZURUL HUQ writes from Tokyo

HEN the Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi made his historic trip to North Korea on September 17, many in Japan presumed that the outcome would be as significant as that of the Sino-US thaw more than three decades ago. At the first ever summit meeting between two East Asian neighbours, the leaders of Japan and North Korea pledged to resume the stalled bilateral talks on establishing diplomatic relations and expressed their desire to solve outstanding issues through negotiations. Despite North Korea's confession of involving in kidnapping Japanese nationals in late 1970s and early 1980s, Koizumi returned triumphantly after the groundbreaking daylong trip and soon found his waning popularity showing signs of recovery as opinion polls once again reflected a sharp upward turn of the curve indicating support for the prime minister.

for the resumption of talks were agreed upon. Accordingly, highlevel official negotiators from Japan and North Korea met for two days at the Malaysian capital of Kuala Lumpur at the end of last month marking the resumption of the stalled negotiation. The much-and eventually the date and venue expected talks that commenced after a gap of almost two-years, however, ended without any progress on crucial issues. For Japan the issue considered to be of utmost importance was that of the abducted Japanese nationals and what should be done with five surviving abducted Japanese citizens who are now making a homecoming visit. North Korea, on the other hand, was not willing to discuss an issue that they considered has already been solved when country's leader Kim Jong III disclosed facts at the summit meeting with the Japanese premier and accused Japan of breaking an Korea. agreement by not allowing the five visiting abducted Japanese to

The two countries maintained return to Pyongyang. close liaison since Koizumi's visit A new stumbling block that Despite the optimism created after the landmark summit of the leaders of Japan and North Korea, there is simply no shortcut in overcoming difficulties that stand between the two nations. Looming back in the background is also the question of US involvement. Any deal with North Korea on the nuclear issue will have to meet conditions Washington would consider satisfactory.

emerged after North Korea arms issue as part of the normalisaannounced last month of its continution talks. North's delegation at the ation of country's clandestine meeting made it clear that their nuclear weapon programme cregovernment regarded its acknowlated further complication that evenedged nuclear weapon's tually proved to be a difficult hurdle programme as a matter to be sorted for Japan to overcome. Tokyo is out with the United States. Pyongconcerned that Japan is as much a yang is thought to have taken the target of Pyongyang's nuclear firm line that the US should opt for programme as Washington is, and concluding a non-aggression treaty hence demanding that North Korea to solve the issue as Washington discuss the issue with Japan at has identified North Korea as a bilateral security talks. The abancomponent of an 'axis of evil' and doning of North Korea's nuclear threatened to launch pre-emptive ambition has thus become another strikes key issue for Japan in the process of normalisation of relations with North of the continuation of country's

At the Kula Lumpur meeting cated the whole process of negotia-North Korea outrightly rejected tion and Japan suddenly found Japan's bid to discuss the nuclear trapped in a matter that country's negotiators were not at well prepared to face. Ever since the date for the resumption of negotiation was announced, Japan concentrated on the humanitarian matters related to the abduction issue and was preparing for creating pressure on the North Korean side to find out an accepted solution to the problem. The government is under increasing pressure from the group of relatives of abducted citizens and their supporters as well as from recognised hawks within the ruling parties who are demanding that no discussion North Korea's acknowledgement should proceed with Pyongyang unless the whole truth behind the nuclear programme has compliabduction issue is revealed. As a their homecominas.

result, the Japanese delegation attending the Kuala Lumpur talks also had little in a way of scope for flexible manoeuvring. During talks Japanese negotiators found themselves caught between public outrages back at home and an adamant North Korean delegation accusing Japan of not keeping the commitment of sending back five abducted Japanese nationals after

But one positive development that encouraged many within Japan's official circle is North Korea's change of attitude towards to concede on most of the issues for such negotiations. Despite the an early resolution and is instructing obvious irritation with the Japanese his negotiators to quicken the proteam, the North Korean delegation cess. Based on such assumption, stuck to the discussions. In the past they usually walked out, leaving the situation by skilfully playing the normalisation process deadlocked. This also encouraged Japan to Pyongyang at the negotiating table. tighten her own position regarding demands being made to Pyong-approach most likely has been among North Korean officials who economic assistance card to keep

The meeting in Kuala Lumpur underscored the reality that despite the optimism created after the The Japanese government took landmark summit of the leaders of tougher approach with North Japan and North Korea, there is Korea after the stalemate at Kuala simply no shortcut in overcoming Lumpur, saying it won't bother with a difficulties that stand between the second round of talks in November two nations. Looming back in the unless North Korea promises to background is also the question of send the families of five abducted US involvement. Any deal with Japanese nationals. A task force of North Korea on the nuclear issue country's foreign ministry also will have to meet conditions Washconfirmed that the government ington would consider satisfactory. would continue to place priority in negotiations on the abductions and

But as long as lines of communication between concerned govsecurity concerns. This hard-line ernments remain open, there also triggered by signs of nervousness remains hope that a negotiated settlement of issues would eventuhad tried to avoid any breakdown of ally be reached. At the end of the negotiation. There are every reason Kuala Lumpur meeting Japan for Japan now to believe North brushed aside North Korea's pro-Korean leader Kim Jong II is willing posal for the next round of normalisation talks in November. But the Japanese officials however assured their North Koran counterparts that the lines of communication would Tokyo now intends to cash on the remain open. So, with that we can hope that not all is over yet of the optimism that set in the mood of discussions only a few weeks ago

Where did they learn to be so they were soaked in the deadly juice stupid? Where did they learn to throw away their future in order to hate someone? Perhaps that is how watching it happens when adults act childish and children behave like adults. But the adults have forgotten that