Sanitation programme yet to succeed in Satkhira

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Satkhira

Most people who live in the rural areas of Assasuni, Shyamnagar, Kaligonj, Tala, Debhata, Kalaroa and Sadar upazilas still use kutcha latrines instead of sanitary latrines.

Department of Public Health Engineering (DPHE) and United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) supplied sanitary equipment, but they completely failed to achieve the target in the rural areas in seven upazilas and even in the district town due to mismanagement and malpractices prevailing in the department. Lack of public awareness regarding use of sanitary latrines and also poverty are the other causes of failure of the programme.

Moreover, Local Government Engineering Department (LGED) is spending crores of taka financed by various United Nations (UN) organisations, but could not do anything due to existing malpractice.

People of Assasuni, Debhata, Shyamnagar, Kaligonj, Tala, Kalaroa and Sadar upazilas live in a sub-human condition due to environmental pollution caused by night soils on open spaces on roadsides, river banks, in canals and ponds and near bushes.

Besides, in the rural areas, the cultivators store cowdung adjacent to their dwelling houses and they use kutcha latrines which spread bad odour and pollute the environment.

Moreover, they rotten jute in ponds, tanks and ditches adjacent to their homesteads also cause air pollution resulting in various diseases like dysentery, malaria and skin diseases.

A large number of people mostly children die of these diseases for want of proper treatment. Recently due to environmental pollution a new type of fever has broken out.

Butchers indiscriminately slaughter sick and old cattle and blood, bones and remains of the slaughtered animals are thrown nearby the markets and roadsides spreading germs and bacteria in large number.

Old and sick animals which are mostly brought from India are largely available in the cattle markets in all seven upazilas of the district at very cheaper rates. Beef is now being sold at Tk. 60 to 70 per kg.

On the other hand, shrimp is produced in Satkhira in vast areas of the district and is exported to foreign countries. Heads and other parts of shrimp are thrown at a close distance of the factories and roadside ditches spreading germs and bacteria in large number and causing serious health hazards.

Besides, a large number of bidi factories, hotels and restaurants emit thick smoke which pollutes air constantly. As a result the town dwellers are deprived of fresh air and suffer from stomach and intestinal and ophthalmic ailments.

In Satkhira Municipality the condition of drains and lavatories are very miserable.

Indiscriminate cutting of trees by brick field owners has been hastening the process of deforestation. They cut fruit bearing trees, bamboo roots for burning bricks.

People have asked the government to take positive steps to bring down the rate of pollution.
