Mohammed Kibria, and followed by the successful artists, going by overseas and local sale, Mahmudul Hag, A. Shakoor, Rokeya Sultana, Kanak Chanpa Chakma and Rafi Haq are due to be exhibited at Oslo. Norway from 2nd December this year. The collection is fine indeed going by the selection of the paintings as regards the subjects, styles colours and presentations. Mohammad Kibria's "untitled" etching, 2002, brings in fragments ridden; each patch of colour appears to emerge from an inner • ONTEMPORARY drive presenting confidence and Bangladeshi paintings led by grace. Yes, he has protested against the memory of 1971 at one time, and now he has shifted from the aoraeous outdoor scenes of Bangladesh, and his colours are muted wherever necessary. Space remains a vital part of Kibria's composition: he does not only employ it to gain a depth of volume or a mindboggling spread; it is, instead, a part of the meaning of his art.

Mahmudul Haque's "Painting-1", water colour (1996), brings in nature that the artist is so enamoured with; arrangement of his composition where the figures are muted with vague but necessary outlines, with the use of bright hues (which work as abstracts of emotion or feeling), that clearly suggest the path that Haque was taking right from the outset. Having mastered the art of print making in mezzotint, etching and aquatint, when in Japan, till 1982, in his oil series "Rain" he captures nature's vital presence. While he proceeds to use the forms of other natural objects (stones, pebbles, etc.) his abstractions took amore geometrical form. In this he had experimented with the inner life of a dramatic impact that had once proved very effective in his works on the Liberation War of 1971 Throughout the 80s, he has experimented with numerous mediums and styles, progressing on to the 90s, when he used the "Mymensingh Geeitka"(a collection of ballads), beginning with pictorial narrative in the manner of medieval manuscript illustration. He has used basic colours, traditional decorative and ornamental designs to frame his stylized figures. Women, men. birds, animals and flora are rich vibrant results of his paintings. Calligraphy is used in plenty in his clouds and a flowering plant, set against gray and shades of blue.

In Rokeya's probing of problematic issues, which vary from ecology to minimizing of women, the artist turns to their intimate human side in evocative details. Her interacting figures look famished and haunted at times and suggest a spoilt ambiance. Rokeva emphasises on line. figure and colour, with stress on human relationship.

nature that livens his inanimate objects. His most recent works have sweeping brush strokes to create more dynamism: while his shapes are angular, a departure from his square canvases, his colours remain warm and buovant, ushering in his determination to experiment further.

Abdus Shakoor's "Rupoboty" water colour (2000), has his preoccupation of working with simplified traditional motifs based on the scroll paintings such as "Gazir Pat" or "Manshar Pata". His work contains romance, reality, life and death in the presentation of the dark beauty complete with her "nalak", delicately but simply done necklace, earrings. "teep" and v-shaped vellow ribbons. Nasreen Begum, who makes her work pleasing to the eye with her magical touch of including nature, along with human forms, has included floral motifs on the woman's dress, and flecks of white and blue. A delicate rope binds her sleeves, symbolizing her caged life, while flowers with red centres gentle drop away from the figure. The backdrop is a variation of indigo and black flecks, while the forefront has swaving lines and soft, muted pink and blue blended washes.

Born in 1956, Nasreen Begum veered to the narrative-

In the backdrop are the hills of her homeland, presented in sketches of black and indigo with an expanse of vermilion graduating to an empty space in font with a few bold suggestive gray lines crayon. Whether delving in drawing or colours, Kanak Chanpa's work explore cultural and psychological aspects, playing with time, and diffusing its urgency by reverting back to the timeless cultural heritage of her people, basing her work on nostalgia. She is committed to women's emancipation and is also preoccupied with the conservation of the ecology of CHT, as she has witnessed from close quarters the dislocation and suffering of her people.
