AFP, Mumbai

At least 23 people, including three children and four women, were killed and 25 others injured, when three bogies of the Karo-Mumbai holiday special train derailed after hitting a boulder which had rolled on the tracks following a landslide in Sindhudurg district in Maharashtra on Sunday night.

The accident occurred at 10.30 pm between Rajapur and Vaibhavwadi when the Mumbai-bound 904 up train from Karwar was passing through a tunnel, Konkan Railway sources said in Mumbai on Monday. This is the first accident on the Konkan Railway sector.

The remaining eight coaches of the train, along with injured persons, were taken to Kankavali by the rescue team.

The injured, 15 of them in serious condition, have been admitted to a hospital there, the sources said.

The seriously injured included the driver and the assistant driver of the train.

Following the derailment, traffic on the Mumbai-Goa section of the Konkan Railway has been severely affected, the sources said.

The landslide was apparently caused due to heavy rains lashing the area for the past several days, sources added.

One of the deceased has been identified as Ratnakar Rane of Mumbai police, the sources said adding, since the train was a holiday special, the list of passengers is not available.

Meanwhile, Railway Minister Nitish Kumar has ordered an inquiry to be conducted by the Commissioner, Safety, Railways, into the accident. Kumar, Railway Board Chairman and other officials have reached the accident site.

Hong Kong declared SARS-free

BBC ONLINE, Hong Kong

Hong Kong has been declared free of Sars, 20 days after the last confirmed case of the disease in the city.

The World Health Organization called the development a "very significant achievement in the history of Sars control", following 296 deaths from the disease in Hong Kong.

The announcement follows the lifting of the WHO's travel advisory on Hong Kong late last month.

But WHO officials are warning that the territory must remain vigilant if it is to avoid the kind of recurrence of the pneumonia-type disease experienced by the Canadian city of Toronto.

Musharraf to shed uniform in 3 years

ANI, London

Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf has said he might step down as chief of army staff within three years. "Due to instability in Pakistan such a move could not happen immediately," he added.

Musharraf said this here on Sunday while on the first leg of his five-nation tour.

It may be recalled that there had been immense pressure on the "president in uniform" to relinquish the post of army chief. Almost the entire Opposition is united on this issue.

Announcing that he was contemplating to quit as army chief within three years, he said, "I do agree in principle that I should not be a combination of president and the chief of army staff and sooner or later I have to give up this appointment of chief of army staff," The News reported on Monday.

However, he said that he was required to wear the uniform due to the prevailing sense of instability in his country. "Under these destabilised conditions, there is a requirement of my wearing these two hats," he said adding, "Once stability comes and let me judge it myself and I will judge it in all sincerity and honesty I will give up the army chief's role."

On the fears of Talibanisation of Pakistan, the President said, "I sincerely think there is no danger, for the reasons I know the people of Pakistan. The majority people of Pakistan and I are against the Talibanisation or extremism or obscurantism view of Islam."

He further said, "Pakistanis are moderate and they want a progressive and enlightened Islamic state. And we are an Islamic State. We are Muslim, the people are staunch Muslims but they certainly are not for an extremist view of Islam. I am very clear about it. So therefore, whatever is happening in the Frontier province must not alarm the world, it is not the perception of the vast majority of people of Pakistan."

Pakistani police said on Monday they had arrested a prominent Islamic militant and four associates from a group linked to the murder of US reporter Daniel Pearl and bloody bombings of Western targets.

Shahab-uddin, alias Imran, a provincial chief of the banned Lashkar-e-Jhangvi, one of Pakistan's most feared militant groups, was arrested overnight in the central city of Multan, they said.

"He was among the top five terrorists of Pakistan and most wanted man of Lashkar," Multan's deputy police chief, Iftikhar Ahmad Chaudhry, told a news conference.

Pakistan officials say the Sunni Muslim Lashkar-e-Jhangvi had close ties with Afghanistan's former Taliban regime, having fought with it against the now ruling Northern Alliance when the United States attacked Afghanistan in 2001.
