The films to be screened in based filmmaking of the 1950s. this part of the retrospective are: A bout de souffle (Breathless, 1959), Le And they propagated for a new kind auteur cinema which would Petit soldat (The Little Soldier, 1960), Une femme est une femme (A Woman Is a Woman, 1961), Les Carabiniers (The Riflemen/The Soldiers, 1963), Le Mepris (Contempt, 1963), and Pierrot le fou (Foolish Pierrot/Crazy Pete, 1965). See "Recommendations" column of this page for screenings details. Six more films will be screened in the second part of the retrospective on 10, 11, and 12 August 2003.

Jean-Luc Godard, the leader of the filmmakers of the French 'New Wave', was born in Paris to Swiss parents on 3rd December 1930. He started watching films during his Sorbonne University days. His passionate devotion to cinema brought him in close contact with Andre Bazin, Francois Truffaut, Jacques Rivette, Eric Rohmer and reflect the reality as it is. So they started shooting their films on location in real settings with 16 m.m. portable cameras.

making their first features at the same time - in 1958-59, though they had already made several short films and documentary films by then. In their first efforts, they often collaborated with one another. Their recognition came almost immediately at the 1959 Cannes Film Festival. Orfeu Negro (Black Orpheus) made by novelist Albert Camus' brother Marcel Camus and Les Quatres cents coups (The Four Hundred Blows) made by Francois Truffaut won the top prizes at the Festival

Godard made his first feature film A bout de souffle (Breathless) in 1959. The film was well received by the critics as well as the viewers. The film paved the way for the 'Nouvelle Vague' which in French means 'New Wave'. It was the harbinger of a new age - an age of freedom and non-conformity, of youthful aspirations and frustrations, of existentialist crisis and absurdist realisations, of unemlpoyment and survival, of generation gap and miscommunication, of mobility a n d technical innovations.Francois Truffaut provided the storyline and Claude Chabrol provided the technical advises to Breathless. Who else but Godard could make such a perfect film! A film cannot be more perfect than this one. Jean-Paul Belmondo is a cop-killer hiding out in Paris with his girlfriend Jean Seberg. Seberg, an American student, sells 'New York Herald Tribune' on the roads in Paris and thus tries to manage her expenses. They live together and the inevitable takes place. This film noir parody rewrote cinematic grammar with innovative editing.

In The Little Soldier a man is turning to reflection from action: Bruno Forestier (Michel Subor) is a secret agent working against Algerian terrorists in France, but he doesn't believe in his fight, and his mind is full of aesthetic and philosophical questions. A Woman Is a Woman is Godard's first colour and widescreen film. It is a delightful, loving send-up of MGM musicals, with Anna Karina as a stripper who wants a baby. When lover Jean-Paul Belmondo won't oblige, she goes to his best friend Jean-Claude Brially. Les Carabiniers (The Soldiers) is an extreme attack on the absurdity of war seen through the eyes of two morons who enlist as mercenaries. Contempt takes a tongue-in-cheek, raised-eye-brow look at European filmmaking. Jack

Jean-Luc Godard : the editor in action

Palance is a vulgar producer; filmmaker Fritz Lang, playing himself, is his director; Godard plays Lang's assistant, and in directing this adaptation of The Odyssey by Homer turned into an inside joke in real (not reel) life, he held the film's producer Joseph E. Levine in contempt. Brigitte Bardot and Michel Piccoli act as the leads in the film-within-film. Pierrot le fou (Foolish Pierrot) is a complex drama about a man (Belmondo) who leaves his rich wife and runs off with a beautiful young woman (Anna Karina) who is fleeing some gangsters. Shot on location in south France, this existential character drama fascinates the viewers

Jean-Luc Godard writes and edits his own films. In his later films, he often collaborated with other filmmakers like Edgar Gorin and Anne-Marie Mieville. Godard is still relentlessly making films. This prolific and versatile filmmaker has proved himself to be not only the greatest French filmmaker ever but also one of the greatest filmmakers in the history of the world cinema. He is the filmmaker of the filmmakers. We pay our tribute to this cinematic genius who changed the course of the history of the cinema.
