Troops deployed in Naniarchar

Crimes by PCJSS, UPDF stopped, villagers say

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Rangamati

Troops have been deployed in Naniarchar upazila following appeals by villagers to protect them from rampant extortion, killings, kidnappings and other crimes allegedly by activists of Parbatty Jana Sanghati Samiti (PCJSS) and UPDF (United Peoples Democratic Front).

The two rival bodies want to keep the area under their control.

Villagers said extortion has virtually stopped in the area after troops' deployment on Wednesday.

They said troops now guard all roads and markets in Naniarchar, Kutukchhari and Gilachhari. Shops have reopened and trading begun at the markets. People can move freely in the area, they said.

Earlier, local people, led by tribal leaders and public representatives, submitted memoranda to the authorities several times to protect them from crimes by the PCJSS and UPDF. They also barricaded roads to to press their demand.

Chairman of Rangamati Hill District Council (RHDC) Maniklal Dewan and Rangamati Deputy Commissioner Zafar Ahmed Khan had visited the area recently and assured of security measures.

They told the local people that all necessary measures would be taken to ensure security.

The DC had also held a meeting with the chairmen of Kutukchhari and Gilachhari Union Parishads at Kutukchhari bazaar on Tuesday last. Village headmen also joined the meeting.

Earlier the district administration held a meeting with PCJSS and UPDF to persuade them to stop crimes in the area, but to no effect.

The two rival groups clashed in the area frequently, claiming lives. On July 26, three persons were killed in a shootout between the rival activists.

They imposed 'tax' on people. Many villagers fled homes failing to meet their demands.

Agitation against grading system in exam CU students firm on abolition, authorities reluctant

SHAHADAT HOSSAIN RIAD, Ctg

Stalemate over grading system in examination persists at Chittagong University (CU) as students, now on movement for its cancellation, are firm on their demand while the authorities are reluctant to revoke it.

CU Vice-chancellor Prof AJM Nuruddin Chowdhury at a workshop on Friday on the campus said, "If we revoke the system, students will suffer in the long run because the system is international and has already been introduced in almost all the universities and even at SSC and HSC levels.

"We are trying to revamp the system as per recommendations to be submitted by deans (of faculties). We are cautious regarding future of our students".

On the other hand, the students, backed by student fronts of political parties, held rallies, processions and are boycotting classes and examinations to realise their demand.

Amid the student movement, the CU authorities at an emergency meeting on Tuesday formed an advisory committee to report on the issue by 10 days.

But the students, ignoring this, declared a four-day programme which includes a 'grand rally' tomorrow on the campus where they will announce their next course of action.

When contacted, Shihab, one of the movement organisers, said they will lay 'an indefinite siege' on the campus to realise their demand.

Students boycotted classes and examinations on Thursday.

A dean of a faculty preferring anonymity said most of the teachers prefer the grading system. Some of the teachers however said they are not well aware of the system.

Students are demanding cancellation of the system as it makes them ineligible for jobs although they do well in examinations. Even if CU students secure grade point 3.5, which is equivalent to Fist Class, they can not apply for jobs.

In some recent advertisements for jobs, grade point 3.5 was considered as Second Class marks and students who passed from Chittagong University under the grading system could not apply, they said.

Grading system was introduced in the university in 1998-99 session.

Dhaka university does not follow the grading system, they said.
