Women's World Cup kicks off today

AFP, Washington

Defending champion United States will begin the Women's World Cup as a favorite playing on home soil, but improved global rivals threaten the Americans' reign when the football showdown opens Saturday.

Asian champion North Korea, African champion Nigeria and perennial power Sweden will test the US women in the Cup's Group A first-round "Group of Death" far before the hosts can look to the October 12 final in Carson, California.

"Looking past our group would be premature," said US defender Brandi Chastain, whose winning penalty kick in a shoot-out lifted the Americans past China in the 1999 final.

Olympic champion Norway, 1999 World Cup runner-up China and South American dynasty Brazil are title threats. Australia, Japan, South Korea, Ghana, Russia, France, Canada, Germany and Argentina also have qualified.

"There are at least eight teams that have a chance to win the trophy," China coach Ma Liangxing said.

The Chinese have never lost to any of their Group D rivals -- Ghana, Russia and Australia -- while Germany is favored over Canada, Argentina and Japan in Group C and Norway, France and Brazil join longshot South Korea in Group B.

Several nations have invested in women's football and risen quickly into prominence.

"They saw what a success it was in 1999 and now a lot of countries are funding their women's programs and putting emphasis on them and giving them a chance instead of just barely having a team," US defender Kate Sobrero said.

Another factor was the Women's United Soccer Association, a US women's pro league which folded Monday for lack of money. Top talent from around the world, including 56 Cup players, sharpened their skills in the WUSA.

"We're sad. We're all sad," US star forward Mia Hamm said. "This is something (in which) we've all invested so much time and energy."

Hamm, the 31-year-old forward who is football's all-time scorer, joins Kristine Lilly, Julie Foudy, Joy Fawcett and Chastain as veteran leaders on the Cup's oldest team, with an average age of 28 despite new young talent.

US women dream the league can be revived if they shine again as they did in 1999 to spark the league's formation.

"We will have to deal with the black cloud and then we will have to put it behind us," US coach April Heinrichs said.

China was to have hosted the 16-team, 32-match affair. But the outbreak of Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) forced FIFA to relocate the event and US officials accepted the short-notice hosting challenge.

North Korea, the Stalinist nation whose nuclear arms program has heightened tensions between leader Kim Jong Il and American officials, has overtaken China as Asia's top women's team.

With impressive speed and endurance, strong counter-attack skills and years of work together, North Korea will be a formidable foe against the US squad September 28 at Columbus, Ohio.

"Team spirit gives us our power," North Korean goalkeeper Chon Kyong Hwa said during a reception in Philadelphia, where her team plays Nigeria after the French face Norway in the opening matches Saturday.

Opening ceremonies will be here Sunday before the US women host Sweden and the South Koreans meet Brazil, which features playmaker Katia and Milene Domingues, the wife of Brazilian men's World Cup hero Ronaldo.

China's Sun Wen, playing in her final World Cup, needs two goals to match the all-time World Cup finals record of 12 owned by American Michelle Akers.

Campbell might not play

AFP, London

Sol Campbell has been told he can opt out of Arsenal's showdown with Manchester United on Sunday if he wishes following the death of his father.

Campbell took part in Wednesday night's Champions League tie against Inter Milan even though his 74-year-old father, Sewell, had suffered a stroke as his condition was thought to have stabilised.

But his father later died and Campbell has been told he has until Saturday to make a final decision about playing.

"We will leave it up to him. First and foremost our thoughts and sympathy are with Sol and his family at the tragic news. We will wait and see how he recovers from it," Arsenal boss Arsene Wenger told the Evening Standard.

If Campbell, who turned 29 yesterday, decides that he is not up to playing at Old Trafford, Martin Keown would be expected to partner Kolo Toure in defence, although Pascal Cygan is another option.

Ronaldo having fun!

AFP, Madrid

Brazilian superstar Ronaldo said Friday the arrival of David Beckham had taken some of the pressure off him, allowing him to enjoy his football more than ever.

"I am enjoying the football we are playing and it's an honour to be on the field with my teammates. We're having a great time and the 90 minutes fly by," said the striker, who arrived last year from Inter Milan and who earlier had a brief, if successful, spell with Barcelona.

"With Inter I definitely didn't have so much fun and things are better now than they were with Barcelona," he told reporters at Real's training ground.

"We have made a good start to the season, but we can do better," said the man whose two goals helped shoot down Marseille in Tuesday's Champions League opener which the Spanish giants won 4-2.

"I hope I can keep on scoring goals and help the team stack up the points."

Ronaldo admitted Beckham's signing had helped as he was himself less in the spotlight.

"I am calmer than I was last year, when the pressure was fully on me," he explained, having been the big signing of the summer as Beckham was this pre-season.

"This year I'm having fun and with so many stars the attention is divided among us.

"Beckham is a great player and getting better and better with us. His appetite and performance may surprise some but not us. We were already well aware of it."

Ronaldo has promised to bag at least 35 goals this season and will be looking to move nearer to that total in Sunday's league game at Malaga.

"With the quality we have we can enjoy an unforgettable season. We will try to win both titles," he added, alluding to a league title defence and the Champions League.

"If we can only manage one I'd like it to be the Champions League this time," said the star, who is one of few Real stars yet to lift the trophy, which the club has won nine times overall and three times since 1998.

Ronaldo had to fend off some criticisms in his early months with Real, whom he joined after the 2002 World Cup, where his two goals in the final saw off Germany.

"Last year I had a few problems in the first three months," he told reporters. "But then I felt fine. This year I had more time to tune-up, although the pre-season (tour of Asia) was tough with all the travelling."

"Now I feel fine physically," he said.

Patrick Vieira has warned Manchester United to brace themselves for the backlash from Arsenal's Champions League defeat by Inter Milan.

After being humbled 3-0 by the Italians, the Gunners travel to Old Trafford for Sunday's Premiership summit meeting desperate to extinguish the burning sense of humiliation brought on by the club's worst European result at Highbury in two decades.

"When you have had a bad day like we had against Inter and concede three goals at home, you want the next game to come straight away," Vieira admitted.

"The next game is at Old Trafford so we have the chance to prove everything. We will respond well because I really believe we are strong enough."

Arsenal manager Arsene Wenger did his best to play down the significance of Wednesday's defeat, in which a superbly disciplined Inter ruthlessly exploited the structural faultlines running through his side's defensive strategy.

But he acknowledged that it had raised the stakes involved in Sunday's encounter between his 2002 double winners and the reigning champions.

"We want to go up there and show how strong we are. It is not only points that are stake, we also have to show that we are mentally strong."

Vieira has his own private point to prove. In the corresponding fixture last season he found himself dominated by an inspired Phil Neville as an injury-wracked United secured a 2-0 victory which laid the foundations for a revival which ultimately delivered the title.

Vieira could find himself up against Neville once more with United skipper Roy Keane doubtful for the match with an ankle injury.

Keane, who sat out United's 5-0 Champions League thrashing of Panathinaikos in midweek, has looked back to his old self this season but it is feared the injury could be serious enough to warrant surgery that would sideline him for up to six weeks.

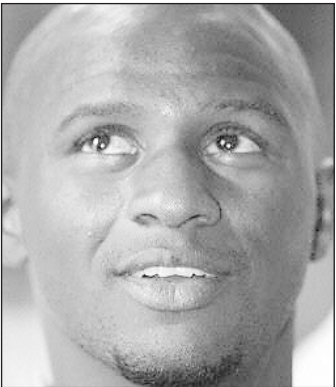

United-Arsenal clashes in recent years have all been full-blooded affairs in which penalties have repeatedly played a crucial role.

But despite his midweek miss

With the big showdown not until Sunday, Manchester City can go top of the table on Saturday with victory away to Fulham.

American midfielder Claudio Reyna can expect a hostile reaction from the home crowd after snubbing Fulham at the last minute to join City in the summer.

Liverpool will seek to put their row with Blackburn over the Lucas Neill tackle that broke Jamie Carragher's leg behind them when they take on Leicester at Anfield.

PATRICK VIEIRA

against Inter, Thierry Henry insists he will be taking any that come Arsenal's way on Sunday.

"I don't know any player in the world who never missed a penalty," he said. "I can't hide. I will be taking the next one."

With Paul Scholes still sidelined, United look set to continue with Ryan Giggs in a free floating forward role alongside Ruud van Nistelrooy. Giggs was inspirational against Panathinaikos and is relishing the prospect of the showdown with Arsenal.

"Big games bring out the best in you, that's when the big players come out and do their stuff," Giggs said. "The last two or three games with Arsenal have been quite feisty and you can expect more of the same on Sunday."

Reds manager Gerard Houllier is hoping for more of the same from El Hadji Diouf, who has enjoyed a scintillating start to the season after being branded a ten-million-pound flop in his first year at the club.

"We were probably too impatient with him when he came here because it was on the back of two major competitions, the African Nations and the World Cup," Houllier reflected.

"Now we are seeing the best of him. His team-mates like him because he works hard, never hides and is a team player."

Glenn Hoddle's Spurs will entertain his former club Southampton at White Hart Lane with the beleaguered manager knowing a fourth defeat in six games this season could cost him his job.

Kahn can't see or hear!

Football

AFP, Munich

Bayern Munich's star goalkeeper Oliver Kahn has had eye and ear problems hampering his performance so far this season and early Friday awoke with inflamed eyes he could hardly see out of.

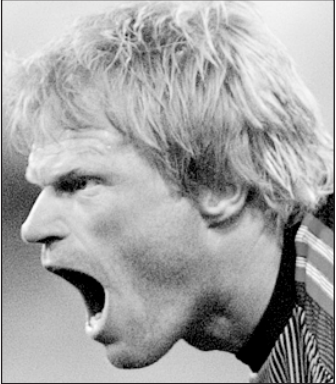

The 34-year-old Germany international has had problems for both club and country this season because of conjunctivitis which has affected his vision, and ear problems which required his ear drums to be burst.

"His conjunctivitis has recently got worse but he will keep his place this weekend," said Bayern coach Ottmar Hitzfeld whose side meet Leverkusen at their Olympic stadium on Saturday. "He has major problems."

Kahn has recurring blurred vision and Hitzfeld added doctors did not understand why but specialists were looking into the matter.

After Friday's further problems Kahn had further tests and it is believed sinus problems could be complicating matters.

OLIVER KAHN

Kahn had thought about pulling out of Wednesday's Champions League match against Celtic and warmed up with a headband to prevent drops of sweat irritating his eyes.

The problems first came to light in a Euro 2004 qualifier in June against the Faroe Islands when he stayed in the dressing room after the first half and was substituted by Frank Rost.

Since Bayern pre-season training in July, Kahn has also had ear problems and required treatment to burst his ear drums on several occasions. He had also been told not to fly for a period.

Kahn, the best keeper at the 2002 World Cup finals as Germany reached the final, has not surprisingly not been up to his usual high standard this season.

On Saturday during Bayern's 3-2 defeat at VfL Wolfsburg, Kahn made a mistake on the edge of his area allowing Brazilian Fernando Baiano to open the scoring. He has also conceded seven goals in five Bundesliga matches this season.

Deportivo holding their own

Football

AFP, Madrid

Real Madrid and David Beckham are grabbing the headlines but it is Deportivo La Coruna who are topping the Spanish first division with a 100 per cent record and they are out to keep their winning streak alive at Albacete on Sunday.

The 1999-2000 champions have rattled off three straight wins while newly-promoted Albacete are already starting to fulfil pre-season predictions that they will be going straight back to the second division by failing to get a point and only one goal in their first trio of outings.

The Galicians lost European Golden Shoe winner Roy Makaay in the summer to Bayern Munich but Uruguayan striker Walter Pandiani has stepped into the breach and scored in his last four games after returning from a season on loan at Real Mallorca.

"Pandiani has done everything I have wanted and asked from him so far this season," said Deportivo coach Javier Irureta, who has clearly forgiven some of the sour comments Pandiani made on his way to island exile after two years in a reserve role at Deportivo.

Deportivo would like to repeat the 5-0 thrashing they handed out to Albacete the last time the two teams met in the league in La Coruna eight seasons ago, but Irureta has to replace suspended right back Hector Belengué del Pino and midfielder Lionel Scaloni might be asked to drop back.

Last season, Malaga were 2-0 ahead at half time in the corresponding fixture only to throw the game away by conceding three second half goals.

The feelings for revenge are squad but the young guys are not going to give up their places easily," said Real goalkeeper Iker Casillas.

Barcelona lie third with seven points after three games, and are looking to keep up the pressure on the top two with a strong performance against Osasuna on Saturday.

The cash-strapped Pamplona club, who spent a meagre 1.5 million euros strengthening their squad this summer compared to the Catalan giants' outlay of 41 million euros, have been a reminder to Barcelona of how far their fortunes have fallen in recent seasons.

Osasuna have notched up a 2-2 draw and a 1-0 win in the Nou Camp on their last two visits.

However, Barcelona are slowly returning to their traditional role of Spanish first division bully rather than playground wimp.

"I've got a lot more to show and this weekend might be the time to do it," threatened Barca's Ronaldinho.

"It has taken me a little time to get into my stride, and I'm still slightly struggling to play at full tilt for 90 minutes, but I am getting there. And if I don't score goals then I am sure I will get that I do will help (Patrick) Kluijver and (Javier) Saviola get some."

Turin brace for fireworks

Football

AFP, Rome

Whenever Juventus and Roma play sparks fly and Sunday's top-of-the-table clash in Turin promises to be as explosive as ever.

A thorny relationship that has lasted more than 20 years became even more fractious this summer after Juventus hijacked Roma's attempts to sign Nicola Legrottaglie from Chievo.

Roma president Franco Sensi thought he had closed the deal after holding lengthy negotiations with the 26-year-old, only for Juve general director Luciano Moggi to scupper the deal at the last minute.

The prospect of playing in the Champions League, which Roma failed to qualify for, proved decisive in luring the central defender to Turin.

Sensi reacted angrily after being outdone by his nemesis Moggi, with whom he has been at loggerheads for several years.

"I was dealing with Legrottaglie and then got cheated," he fumed.

Legrottaglie fanned the flames of an ugly transfer spat when he gave his reasons for turning his back on Roma.

"How could you choose Roma ahead of Juve? Juve are the strongest team in the world and I am happy and honoured to play for them," said the Italy international.

The tussle for Legrottaglie is the latest chapter in a feud that began in May 1981 when the two teams were battling for the Italian league title.

With three matches of the campaign left, Roma visited Juventus for a potential Scudetto decider trailing their Turin rivals by one point.

After 80 goalless minutes, Roma's Brazilian star Falcão latched on to a high ball and headed it forward to team-mate Roman Torone.

The nimble-footed sweeper escaped his marker and swept the ball home past Dino Zoff for what looked like a perfectly good goal and one that would have taken Roma a step closer to the championship.

But referee Paolo Bergamo disallowed the goal for offside after consulting his linesman and the match ended 0-0.

Television replays showed Torone to be clearly onside, prompting Roma officials and supporters to lash out in anger, accusing Juventus of "influencing" the referee.

Juventus held on to their advantage and lifted the title weeks later.

Roma and Juve are tied on six points with Lazio, AC and Inter Milan in a five-way tie at the top of Serie A.

Roma's Romanian defender Christian Chivu, who scored a debut goal in Sunday's 5-0 thrashing of Brescia, said his team had nothing to fear about facing the Italian champions.

"If we continue to play the way we have been lately, we won't have any problems," he said.

Juventus are looking to make amends for a poor performance in the Champions League on Wednesday when they scraped a 2-1 win over Galatasaray.

In Sunday's other matches, Inter Milan, who kicked off their Champions League campaign with a stunning 3-0 win away to Arsenal on Wednesday, host Sampdoria at the San Siro, while European champions AC Milan, 1-0 winners over Ajax on Tuesday, visit Perugia.

Lazio, who won 2-0 away to Besiktas in their Champions League opener on Tuesday, entertain Parma at the Olympic stadium.
