The Forest Department is launching a program to conserve Bangladesh's natural forests, with assistance from the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) and other national and international partners. The program will focus initially on improving management and conservation of Bangladesh's existing National Parks and Wildlife Sanctuaries, principally through establishment of agreements to share the benefits from and responsibility for conservation with local and national stakeholders. The program is an attempt to address the steady loss of Bangladesh's natural forests, with all that such loss of forests means for our current and future generations.

Students from around the country are encouraged to join in this national effort by participating in a competition to identify a suitable name for the natural forest conservation program.
The name should be submitted in Bangla, and should not exceed two words. Participants should explain - in Bangla or English - why the name was chosen. Submissions should be made on a single sheet of foolscap. The chosen program name should appear in large letters at the top of the sheet, and text, drawings or photographs may be used to explain the choice of the name. Students should be sure to include their name, mailing address and telephone number. Any student not yet having completed HSC may apply. Submissions will be reviewed by a Panel including the Forest Department and its key national and international partners. Four runners-up will each receive an award of Tk 5,000, and the winner will receive Tk 10,000. A small travel stipend to collect the award will also be given to the five selected students. Submissions should be sent to the address listed below before October 22, 2003. Finalists will be chosen and notified by November 9, 2003 and an awards ceremony will be held in Dhaka soon afterwards.
