Not at home

Cricket

LENIN GANI

The question is not how but why the Bangladeshi cricketers once again failed on home soil. Probably that will remain unanswered.

Going into the series against England there was a lot of hype that the Tigers would score a success especially in the one-day variety. But no matter how many times the selectors chopped and changed the squad it hardly paid dividends in the end.

Before the first one-day in Chittagong, Bangladesh tried at least eight players to open the innings in 18 games this year alone. The significance of the statement is clearly understood when figures reveal only four occasions where the openers could produce scores of above 20. So far the highest partnership is 43 between Hannan Sarker and Habibul Basher during the tour of Pakistan.

In the three-match series two rookies Nafees Iqbal and Moniruzzaman were introduced as Sarker's partners. Unfortunately neither could grab the opportunity.

Making a big score in a practice match counts for nothing if you can't carry the form into the real thing.

Obviously, Iqbal must have thought having smashed a hundred against the visitors not too long ago it would be a piece of cake the second time round. But England is a professional outfit and they had a plan worked out for him.

Moniruzzaman forced his way into the team being a consistent scorer in the domestic league but he too was found wanting against deliveries that either rose steeply or moved away off the seam or through the air.

In any case the fundamental requirement for any player is not to go 'fishing.' Both didn't learn their lesson against James Anderson or Richard Johnson.

It must be said an over-indulgence on the part of the selectors to experiment only added to the players' confusion.

Continuity was the need of the hour there was no need to upset the balance. Bangladesh should have followed England's cue to remain virtually unchanged with devastating effect.

We haven't reached that particular stage where we can form separate Test and one-day teams. We must work within available resources.

Another striking feature was the lack of understanding between coach and players.

Dav Whatmore was the first to admit there does exist a 'communication gap' between him and his young charges. The Bangladesh coach might be right because a strange pattern emerged of getting everything right in the nets then coming horribly unstuck on the battlefield the next day.

Cricket like any other sport is where reputations are built and destroyed. If you can't stand the heat then get out of the kitchen it's simple as that.

That could apply to Alok Kapali. The talented all-rounder definitely lacks self-confidence these days. But surprisingly the selectors chose to ignore his pleas for help. The 19-year-old was definitely struggling even while on tour in Pakistan but still he was retained in the team for the series against England. Chief selector Faruque Ahmed should have rested him as soon as the Tigers flew home like he did in the case of young batsman Mohammad Ashraful.

Time is a great healer. Had Kapali been allowed time away from cricket then it would have helped him to recharge his batteries. Quite frankly he was a liability and his place could've gone to somebody else.

Conversely, one player who stood out head and shoulders above the rest was Mushfiqur Rahman. The jovial Rajshahi lad demonstrated his 'never say die' attitude in the both the Tests and one-day arena. What a pity his enthusiasm didn't rub off on his teammates.

While we admired Rajin Saleh for his brilliant showing in Pakistan, the diminutive right-hander seems to have recently developed a tendency to do the limbo dance. Once in a while it is acceptable but repeatedly doing so only lets opponents know you're a one-dimensional player.

He holds a vital position in the team and he must be taught not to waste deliveries. What we mean is Saleh occasionally has to be aggressive and forget he's not playing a Test match.

At least our tail-enders could show real determination unlike the top-order. Certainly this comes as a relief as Whatmore was very concerned that not enough runs were being scored by the lower half.

Much has been said about captain Khaled Mahmud but without going into the lengths and breaths of the burning issue, the fact of the matter is, nobody seems willing to take the job at the moment. However, if we are wrong and there are any interested candidates we would like to hear from them soon!

'Trial' tour of Pakistan

Cricket

SPORTS REPORTER

With the end of a hectic five-month international schedule on Wednesday, the Bangladesh Cricket Board (BCB) is now planning to send some non-performing cricketers to Pakistan to play in the Patron's Trophy as members of the Bangladesh A team.

At least half of the Bangladeshi team players will accompany the A team when it flies out on November 27 on a two-month tour. The team will play eight first-class matches against leading Pakistani office sides.

Talking to The Daily Star Sport, BCB advisor and chairman Cricket Committee, Mabubul Anam without naming anyone, said that those players would face a trial to stake claims for places in next year's Zimbabwe tour.

"I'm not very sure how many national cricketers will go to Pakistan with the A team because the selectors have not yet finalised the actual number. But they will be there until the end of December and then return to attend the Zimbabwe camp, which we are planning from January 3," he said adding that a national selector would accompany the A team.

Besides, coach Dav Whatmore will also travel to Pakistan to see how the Tigers would have a two-week camp in Namibia before going to Zimbabwe for two Tests and three ODIs.

"This is going to an acid test for them because if the non-performing cricketers cannot show improvement they will find difficult to get into the selection trials for the tour of Zimbabwe," Anam said on Wednesday night.

He said that Board will select 20 cricketers for the Patron's Cup so that they don't face problems with replacements once some players return home in the middle of the competition to attend the national camp.

The 20-member list will be finalised next week. But Anam couldn't say when the camp for the Pakistan-bound team would start or who'll be the coach.

However, he informed that the Tigers would have a two-week camp in Namibia before going to Zimbabwe for two Tests and three ODIs.

Bangladesh will reach Namibia on January 28 to play a four-day match and three limited-overs matches before flying to Zimbabwe on February 10 for the start of a five-week tour.

Bad Biman landing

SPORTS REPORTER

Holders Bangladesh Biman squeezed into the Emirates 27th National Cricket Championship with a three-wicket win over Jersore in first semifinal at the Bangabandhu National Stadium yesterday.

Chasing a paltry Jersore total of 107 in 50 overs, the national airliners lost seven wickets before reaching the target in 37 overs.

Against all odds Biman captain Sanwar Hossain remained at the crease to score an unbeaten 37 to ensure his side confirmed a berth in the November 20 final.

Abahani at Mukti's mercy

Football

The result left Abahani in a dicey situation. They will now have to at least draw their final Group B game against Mukti Joddha at Mirpur tomorrow to win a place in the last four.

Mukti Joddha however won't mind a draw in their clash against Abahani because it would place them at the top of the table and more importantly allow them to avoid a semifinal meeting with Mohamme-dan Sporting Club, who are leading the other group.

When the Reds prospered at Mirpur fellow title-contenders Abahani Krira Chakra stumbled to a goalless draw against Rahmatganj Muslim Friends Society at the Bir Shreshtha Shaheed Mustafa Kamal Stadium in Kamalapur.

The newly-built venue in Kamalapur has certainly earned the reputation as a boggy ground for the giants when the popular Dhanmondi outfit became the latest victim after season's sensation Brothers Union's exit from the same ground in the first round early this month.

Fresh after a 2-0 victory over Arambagh, the sky blues did push the old timers at their own half with waves of attacks but found all sorts of problems when it came down to finding the target.

Ghanaian forward Kennedy missed two easy chances in the first half. His first attempt in the tenth minute could be best described as a back past to Rahmatganj custodian Anwar. He drove hard in the 31st minute from a vantage position but the ball whistled past the near post of Anwar.

Abahani's exhibition of near misses continued after the break with veteran winger Rakib, striker Khokon joining in the growing list of villains.

Rakib headed a Hasan-al Mamun cross wide off the mark from close in the 63rd minute. Their last chance to grab a winner was denied after Khokon blasted the ball wide in the 88th minute and in injury time.
