

WB condition for inter-district bus terminals

DCC in trouble as lessees dodge dues

AVIK SANWAR RAHMAN

The Dhaka City Corporation (DCC) is struggling to meet the World Bank (WB)'s condition for private operators to run inter-district bus terminals, as the lessees are not paying up their dues.

According to the contractual agreement between the private enterprises and the DCC, the lessees has to pay Tk. 11.90 lakh per month for Sayadabad terminal, Tk. 3.70 lakh for Mohakhali and Tk. 11.5 lakh for Gabtali terminal.

The DCC had leased out the three inter-district bus terminals to two private firms-- Rura Enterprise and Diba Enterprise Ltd. Rura is responsible for Sayadabad and Mohakhali terminals while Diba got the lease of Gabtali terminal.

"We had leased the three bus terminals from October 2003 but still we haven't received the fixed amount from private operators," said a high official of the DCC.

The World Bank had provided Tk. 55 crore to DCC for the development of these inter-district bus terminals on condition that they had to be run by private organisations. WB imposed the prerequisite to curb extortion, human and drug trafficking and illegal toll collection from the terminals.

There are allegations that influential gangs control every terminal, where hundreds of buses arrive and depart daily. Extortion and toll collection are rampant at these places and the beneficiaries reportedly include the police and hoodlums patronised by political leaders and different associations.

The operation rights require the lessees to provide passenger services along with revenue collection for the DCC. In the past, the DCC maintained the passenger service and the toll was collected privately.

Now the private operators are responsible for total management of the terminal. According to the agreement with the DCC, the lessees are entitled to collect Tk. 30 from each bus and truck.

The private operators complained that the DCC violated clauses in the contract by not handing over the ticket counters, public toilets, restaurants, and bus washing facilities to them. There are other problems too that are making it impossible for them to pay up, claimed the operators

"The DCC has given the operation right for ticket counters, toilet, restaurant, bus washing etc. to its chosen people and not to us which is a direct violation of the contract," said Matiuir Rahman, the chairman of Diba Enterprise Ltd.

Construction work is still going on of bays for boarding and disembarking, ticket counters, parking space, waiting rooms, toilets, security room etc.

"If we are not equipped with all the facilities how can we pay the lease amount to the DCC?" asked Rahman.

"There is no garage facility for the buses which is creating a big problem as most of the bus owners don't have their own garages. Buses are therefore staying at the terminals," said Rahman.

Meanwhile, the DCC is thinking of canceling the lease agreement to sources said.

"For the last three months, we have received nothing from the two private operators. We will tender the lease if things continue like this," said a DCC high up on condition of anonymity.

Fines, jail term proposed for noise pollution

SULTANA RAHMAN

The environment and forest ministry will announce the draft of Noise Pollution (Control) Rules, 2003 toward the end of the month, which recommends fines and jail punishment to violators.

"We talked to the law ministry for immediate steps approving the draft, as noise pollution is rising," said Environment and Forest Minister Shajahan Siraj.

The proposed law calls for a fine of Tk 5,000 for primary violators or two months' imprisonment in failure to pay the fine or both.

If the primary violators are found repeating the offence, they will be fined Tk 10,000 or a six-month imprisonment in failure to pay the fine or both.

"The use of machines including generators, stone grinders and welders in residential areas create high-pitched noise," the minister said.

Earlier, the Department of Environment (DoE) sent the draft for approval to its ministry. The draft has classified the areas of a city, town and others and fixed the noise limits -- 45 decibels for silent, 50 for residential, 60 for mixed, 70 for commercial and 75 for industrial zones in daytime - from 6:00am to 9:00pm.

The night-time decibel limits are 35 for silent, 40 for residential, 50 for mixed, 60 for commercial and 70 for industrial areas.

The rules will not be applicable to Azan, religious and public meetings, the army activities, fire services, electioneering and aircraft.

The existing motor vehicle rules can charge up to Tk 2,000 for noise polluters or six months in jail in failure to pay fines.

The DoE director general or his appointed persons will be entitled to execute the rules.

"We will persuade the civil society, NGOs, bus owners and drivers to make the law effective," Shajahan said. "We hope people from all walks of life will accept the law as they did when the government banned polythene bags," the minister hoped.

The environment ministry held meetings to scrutinise the draft with different stakeholders of home, public works and housing, local government, religious affairs and information ministries, the Election Commission and environment experts.

Experts say city dwellers have lost a little of their hearing ability because of extreme noise. The traffic noise in much of the city is above the 80-decibel limit the US Environmental Protection Agency suggested as safe average for 24 hours.

The experts said the use of horn is impulsive and has a damaging impact. Noise over 35 decibels can be detrimental to schoolchildren and can primarily increase their heartbeat and blood pressure.

Other manifestations are nausea, dizziness, gastrointestinal problems, fatigue and behavioural troubles such aggressiveness and sleep disturbances.

Day Two at the Book Fair

At the beginning there was a good number of enthusiastic visitors. But soon they became disappointed to see that most of the stalls at the Ekushey book fair remained unfinished. Most of them then silently dispersed.
