CONSCIENCE AND SOCIETY

Move to ban gay marriages deserves appreciation

MUSLEHUDDIN AHMAD

RESIDENT Bush of late deserves an appreciation for his stand: He has proposed an amendment to the US Constitution banning gay and lesbian marriages. This has support of about 56 per cent Americans, but some are expressing doubts whether the Constitution should at all be amended for the purpose or some other measures, including Executive Orders, be taken. The reason probably is that during the period of 213 years the US had only 17 amendments to its Constitution. Some feel that the amendment would be discriminatory while some others see it as President Bush's political move during the election year. This may be seen as a political move, but this undoubtedly has moral justification. The Democratic Presidential contenders evaded this issue and did not make any comment except one Presidential candidate (not the front runners) who reportedly said one should not bother about who goes to bed with who; the main concern should be how many are going without jobs. This only shows one's lack of respect for the moral and social imperatives thus reflecting the

Regardless of different views expressed by some in the matter, gay marriage is absolutely against what Almighty God ordained for His creation -- setting the rules for marriages which can happen only between opposite sexes. Even dogs and cats and all other creatures other than human beings strictly follow Nature's Order in terms of union of male and female. The nearer to God spiritually. Pope Johm Paul also opposed the gay marriages reflecting the view that it degrades the sense of natural marriage which has been ordained by God.

Gay marriage destroys the very concept of a family -- something God has ordained through Adam and Eve. The whole civilization was created and advanced thereafter on the basis of the union of two opposite sexes. Indeed,

The gay marriages go against the very basis of God's creation -- union of opposite sexes starting from the days of Adam and Eve. Any one going against that must be dealt with appropriately for the sake of appropriate social order and above all to show respect to what Almighty God has ordained for His creation. Therefore, appropriate law should be enacted if it does not exist.

union of same sex is totally unnatural

Indeed, in the Scriptures it is clearly mentioned that God destroyed the and sinful acts. Some time ago, a gay man was appointed as Bishop at an Anglican Church in the USA despite the fact that this was objected to by many Bishops and Cardinals in Anglican Church in both the UK and the USA. Indeed, this raised hue and cry among the people with right mind and having strict adherence to Faith. Today Anglican Church stands divided on this issue. There is absolutely no doubt that the man, being gay, has been committing sins knowing full well that it is a sin and therefore he is in no position to help any one to be God's creation would come to a standstill if all the people on earth turn gay. Therefore, it is totally anti-God and against the basic tenet of Faith and must be rejected by the society at large. Gay marriage must not only be banned, the people engaged in such anti-religious and anti-social activities should be punished appropriately.

Some people say that the deadly disease of AIDS had its origin from the people engaged in gay acts. Only the experts of diseases and medicine can confirm this. If it is a fact, then this must be banned to also stop further spread of deadly AIDS.

The rights of an individual and group or groups emanate from the and good order of a society. The rights of individuals are obviously constrained by the society's order and se rules of behaviour. Moreover, when ar individual talks of his rights, he must also be aware of his obligations to the society in general. One cannot do whatever he likes; the limits are already set by the society's norms. One may say that he has the right to dance naked in public. But can he do that? Obviously not. If he does so he will be considered mad and be dealt with appropriately. The same goes for gay marriages. So the rights and the freedom of individuals living in a society stand circumscribed to the extent the

POINT COUNTERPOINT

The gay marriages go against the very basis of God's creation -- union of opposite sexes starting from the days of Adam and Eve. Any one going against that must be dealt with appropriately for the sake of appropriate social order and above all to show respect to what Almighty God has ordained for His creation. Therefore appropriate law should be enacted if it does not exist. Hence President Bush's stand on Constitutional amendment for banning gay marriages is right and deserves support from the American people as well as the Congress. This should be a lesson for other countries too which are allowing gay marriages and other anti-religious and antisocial activities like cooperative marriages between opposite sexes in the name of freedom and rights of uslehuddin Ahmad is a former Secretary and Ambassador and founder president of North South

Nothing is cast in stone

An interview with Iraq's Sheik Al- Hakim

Ayatollahs, like popes, do not give press interviews. But they do want to be heard. Grand Avatollah Muhammed Hussein Saeed al-Hakim is one of Iraq's top four ayatollahs, who make up the Howza, the supreme religious authority for the country's Shiite Muslims. Another grand ayatollah, Ali Sistani, the most senior of the four members of the Howza, is so influential that when he called for direct elections to choose a government to rule Irag, the Americans felt obliged to comply. Last week he accepted a plan to hold a ballot by the year-end. Al-Hakim's spokesman and son, Sheik Muhammed Hussein al-Hakim, met with Newsweek's Rod Nordland at the cleric's home in Najaf. His views are those of his father and the Howza, he explained, including Sistani. Excerpts:

Q: After so much tragedy (under Saddam), how do you see the future

A: The oppression, then, was by a violent minority over the nonviolent majority. That is over. This is the beginning of a future for Iraq in which the rights of the individual are respected.

Q: How do you feel about the U.S. occupation?

A: The occupying power will stay for a certain time, but occupation cannot last for very long, especially in the 21st century. The main thing is not to impose the future on us, as the O: Your leaders, including Ayatollah Sistani, have softened demands for elections.

A: We demanded elections, first, to establish clearly who sovereignty is handed to, and second, to give legitimacy to the future government. The United Nations thinks early elections are not possible but promised they will be held as soon as possible, not later than the end of this year. But sovereignty has not yet been clearly spelled out. Who will it be handed over to?

Q: What sort of government do you want?

A: A fully legitimate government. But the somewhat good thing about the American attitude is that they are always open to discussions, and this will create room for guidance. What's important is that it be on the basis of population composition, with the preservation of the rights of all factions and all nationalities.

Q: But none of the ayatollahs in the Howza have spoken to American

A: No, clergy with a spiritual message should not be involved in political negotiations with political leaders. But we were in continuous conversation with all the influential authorities, and we were also in a continuous contact with the office of His Eminence Sayid Al-Sistani, in order to have a clear and unified

O: Some Sunnis have challenged up 60 percent of Iraq's population. A: If so, they would have accepted elections. Q: When do you feel the Americans should withdraw from

A: As soon as possible. Remember, at the beginning of the war the Americans said it would be only six months.

Q: Now they suggest it will be A: There is something about the nature of America. All its attitudes can be changed; they do not say one thing once and for all. Nothing is cast Q: What if you don't get the government you want, or the Americans stay longer than you feel is neces-

A: Shias are very patient. We will Americans that occupation is neither in the interest of the American people, nor of Iragis. Q: Is violent opposition justifi-

The Daily Star

A: What's happening now cannot be considered resistance against the occupier. It hurts the Iraqi people. How many Americans have died? Iraqis have suffered more.

Q: What role do you see for Sharia law and Islamic legal principles?

A: We want the Americans to understand that circumstances in this country are different than in Iran. Americans should not keep saying, over and over, that they don't want a government similar to the one in Iran. This is not a real concern; none of us expect this. Our clerics do not seek political posts for themselves, and that's why as soon as the regime fell we advised clerics to steer clear of politics. But that does not mean a cleric is not entitled to go into the field of policy.

(c) 2004, Newsweek Inc. All rights reserved

Chittagong port: Under the spotlight

A.S.M.NAYEEM

HITTAGONG port is the main gateway of Bangladesh through which 85 percent of the sea-borne trade of the country moves. As such its importance in the national economy is paramount. The port needs to be efficient, productive and cost effective so that we can compete, survive and flourish in this age of

Multiplicityofproblems

We often experience a multitude of problems while availing of the Chittagong Port facilities. The problems are mainly opera tional, resulting in low productivity and high cost of portactivities. The tip of the iceberg is that the vessel and container turnaround time is very high, thus pushing up the operational costs of the shipping companies. Such cost inefficiencies ultimately increase the costs of our export and import, naytheeconomy.

Themainoperational problems that we often experience are the following:-

Over-capacity handling: Chittagong Port is working much beyond its handling capacity. It does not have the adequate and modern infrastructrural and equipment facilities to efficiently cater to the requirementsofoursea-bornetrade.

There is a huge supply-demand imbalance. The under-capacity and underequipped supply facilities of the port adversely affect the productivity and operational efficiency, resulting in delay of vessels and container / cargo handling, cost escalations and increased handling and Low productivity: The average productivityofChittagongPortinJuly2003was175 moves per container vessel per day. This reflectsaverylowproductivity. To compare, in the same month Kolkata had 220-240 moves/day, Cochin 225 moves/day, Mumbai 295 moves/day, Karachi 254

High turnaround time: Though over the years the average berth-stay time of the container feeder vessels has decreased due to the positive effects of learning curve and CPA's (Chittagong Port Authority's) increasing priority on the container vessel handlings, it is still very high compared to Presently the average turnaround time of container vessels at Chittagong Portis 5/6 days, which is very high by any standard. Reduction of turnaround time is important from cost point of view. Each day costs a container feeder vessel between US$5,000

Lack of farsightedness: Though over the years container throughput in Chittagong Port has grown substantially, the number of berths and the container storageyard/areahavehardlyincreased.

Container growth: There has been an average growth of 13 percent per annum in the number of containers handled at ChittagongPortduringthelastfewyears. Berthfacilities-impasse:ChittagongPort has only three purpose-built container increasing growth of container traffic.

thevhavetaken.

and trailers are used for moving containers/cargofromandtothevesselhookpoints and for stuffing and unstuffing. Private equipmentarehardlyallowed.

CPA does not have modernised hancould substantially push up the productivity of vessel and container handling opera-Systemloss: We have experienced dock workers, but their attitudes, priorities and greasingforspeedingup; and greasing costs money. In addition, there is always a system ment operators and labour gangs. As per shifttimingwehave22hoursofoperational time. So, practically speaking, round-theinnormalsituation.

Other operational problems: The following problems add fuel to the fire:-Night navigation at full stretch is not available; (ii) Insufficient buoy in the berths, which have been there for over a decade. They are also using three (sometimes more) general purpose berths to handle container vessels. There is obviously afunctional difference between a purpose-

Surprisingly during the past few years government and CPA have not taken prompt and realistic steps for building up new container terminals to cater for the dling equipment, like gantry cranes and RTGs / trans-trainers which, if installed,

CPA lacks in some special purpose cargo handling equipment and heavy lift equipment for container handling. For example, CPA does not have the required equipment for discharge of the over-weight (over 30 tons) containers. As such CPA insists on the Shipping agents / Main Line Operators (MLOs) for making their own arrangement at their own risk and responsibility to discharge such over-weight political / union polarisation deter their efficiency and productivity. They also need lossofatleastthreehourseveryday, because of late start and early finish of port equipclock port operation effectively means 19 hoursofoperation, i.e., 79 percentutilisation

Private off-docks: a bridge between growth and impasse: In the last few years a number of private off-docks have come up to cater for a very substantial part of storage of empty containers and stuffing of export containers. In this respect, CPA, Chittagong Customs, National Board of Revenue (NBR), Bangladesh Export Processing Zones Authority (BEPZA) and the private entrepreneurs really deserve appreciation and credit for the bold, right and timely steps

Had there been no off-docks, Chittagong Port with its present infrastructural facilities would have miserably failed to cater for the import and export growth and requirements of the country withhorifyingconsequentialeffectsonour international trade and domestic econ-

Handling equipment problems: CPA owned/leased equipment, prime movers

In order to facilitate economic growth, the government should immediately give due importance to the port sector and take appropriate action so that the efficiency and productivity of Chittagong Port improve significantly, and Chittagong Port is no longer branded as one of the most expensive ports in the world...Llet the government take it as an agenda for a 5-year term, and let work on today as well as on tomorrow navigational channel; (iii) Docking of the Naval crafts/vessels in the port channel: (iv) Absenceofdredgingofthechannelandjetty front on regular basis; (v) Absence of VTS (VesselTrafficSystem). Security problems: We sometimes hear about pirates attacking vessels at the outer anchorage, pilferage of cargo while in port custody, and at times (though rare) even physical attacks on the foreign sailors inside the port premises. All these erode the image of Chittagong Port in the eyes of the foreign ship Owners. Result is reluctance to call Chittagong Port or addition of a risk premium to freight/charges, specially in the caseofbreakbulkvesselsorcharterhire.

Bureaucratic problems: Lengthy Custom formalities for clearance of import, inadequate auction facilities coupled with CPA and Customs bureaucracies, age-old law and regulations and lack of coordination between CPA and Customs also contribute towards operational slowdown and pushing up of cargo handling costs.

Due to lack of clear-cut guidelines, the "authority-responsibility" matter occasionally oscillates between CPA and Ministry, particularly depending on the desire of the Ministry. As a result, policy decisions suffer at the field level, adding to the miseries of the port users (particularly shipping companies), with consequential decrease in management and operational efficiency of CPA and portusers.

Problems: Government, the major contributor

If we look beyond the surface of the port problems, we find the government and the bureaucracy to be the major hurdle arrestingthesmooth operation of the port, which is very much a government controlled Internationaltradeisdrivenonbusiness and commercial considerations where time and cost are key factors. But to the muchdetrimentofourtradeandeconomy governmenthasfailedtobuild,developand equipthePortfacilitiestomeetthechallengingrequirements of our foreign tradedue to red-tapeism, indecision, slow decision, knowledge gap and lack of farsightedness. What is required is the right vision, probusiness action plan and effective and timelyimplementation of the same.

Inefficiency: A case for privatisation

In order to address the operational efficiency problems of the port, we should go beyond the realm of operation and talk about ownership, management and

It may be prudent to privatise the operation of the port as much and as fast as feasible.Onewayofprivatisation.which has already started, is by moving the cargo and container handling activities to the private off-docks. Presently the private off-docks are storing empty containers and stuffing export containers only. The services of private off-docks may be increased by allowing them to handle FCL (Full Container Load) import containers also. This will automatically lead to privatisation of a substantial part of the port activities, in terms of ownership, management and

In the long run the port may restrict its activities to vessel handling, noncontainersed cargo handling and LCL (Less Container Load) containerised cargo

CPA may even think of privatising a substantial part of their equipment operation like prime movers, trailers, fork lifts, etc. by allowing the direct users to operate their own hired equipment on some realistic basis. Of course, this policy should be taken after proper examination. And a realistic modus operandi should be framed before opening the doors of such privatisation so thattheportactivities do not become a prey of chaos, confusion, congestion and

CPA may even consider giving the security services of the Port premises to the

In due time the government may consider converting the New Mooring Project into a public quoted company, having a legal entity separate from that of CPA. The management should be completely independent and run professionally. The operator should be given a free hand to employ labour and stevedores of their own choice. No Union should be allowed in that company, instead labour and employee welfare committees may be allowedtorepresenttheirinterests. Privatisation of port services will be in linewiththeover-allgovernmentpolicythat the private sector should work as an engine for development and the government shouldworkasafacilitator. Recommendations

Since the problems of Chittagong Port are multidimensional, we have to take a ofactivities in order to improve the situation.

number of steps involving a wide spectrum

Objective of CPA: CPA is a basic service provider, and it is important that it gets its objectives right and tunes its mind set accordingly. Its objective should focus on providing the required services to the port users efficiently and effectively, and at competitive prices.

CPA should plan and take action, guided by the above objective.

Newmooring project: Presently CPA is seriously considering construction of a 1000-metre berthing facility with gantry cranefacilities and with a backups pace of 60 acresintheNewMooringarea.

With an honest desire, seriousness and sincerity of the government and CPA, the project can be completed and made fully operational within a period of 3/4 years having4 to 5 container berths. Adding with the present three purpose-built container berths, the total purpose-built container berths will then be increased to 7/8 which. together with the private off-docks and blessed with pragmatic policy instruments, can adequately cater to the requirements for handling container vessels and cargo for aperiodofanother15yearsorso. Equipment modernisation: Chittagong Port needs further improvementinitscargohandlingcapacitythrough the installation of increased number of modernoperational equipment. As an immediate measure, it is felt that CPA may consider providing gantry crane facilities at the present three container berthswhichwill substantially enhance the efficiency and productivity of container handling operations and reduce the vessel and container turn-around time in the near containerhandlingcapacitysignificantlyby using RTGs / Trans-trainers instead of Straddle Carriers and by switching from the $existing three {\it tiersystem}\, to 6 to 7 {\it tiersystem}\,$ at least for empty and light weight contain-

Further, Chittagong Port can increase its Direct discharging/loading: CPA may consider allowing direct discharge of EPZbound FCL import containers from vessels anddirectloadingofFCLcontainersstuffed in EPZs, off-docks and Dhaka ICD as much as feasible. This will reduce pressure on the storingyardsandthuseaseoutcongestion.

Manpower management: The first and foremost task of the CPA should be to improve the quality of man power engaged in the Port activities, starting from the top man down to a petty worker. It is a team effort, and weak/bad players of the team should be weeded out through effective manpower management. And this is a challenge that the government, CPA and the Unionshave to collectively and success-

Private off-docks: Off-docks should be seen as an extension of the port facilities. CPAmaytakea policy for not storing empty containers in the port premises beyond 21 days and reduce their lift-on and lift-off chargestoencourageemptyremovalsfrom theporttotheoff-docks.CPA and Customs Authority may also consider allowing FCL importhandlingsintheprivateoffdocks. Simplification of procedures: The customs and port procedures, particularly for import, should be simplified, and the decision making chain in this respect should be curtailed. As a simplification measure, the Portand the Custom authorities should introduce computer on-line connections with the main port users like shipping agents, C&F agents and stevedores, and install necessary softwares for transmission and exchange of the required information and data. The custom auction sheds should be increased, and auctions should be expeditedtoeasecongestionintheport.

There should be a Port Operation Committee comprising of Custom and CPA officials and representatives from port users in order to ensure smooth operation by untieing the procedural knots that may cropupfromtimetotime

Decentralisation of authority: CPA should be given more freedom to run their affairs independently and efficiently within the policy framework to be given by the

Concludingremarks

In order to facilitate economic growth, the government should immediately give due importance to the port sector and take appropriate actions othat the efficiency and productivity of Chittagong Port improve significantly, and Chittagong Port is no longer branded as one of the most expensiveportsintheworld. It is impossible to doit overnight. But let the government take it as anagendafora5-yearterm, and letwork on todayas well as on tomorrow. We can then hopetoseeChittagongPortchangingfrom

A. S. M. Nayeem FCA, a Chartered Accountant, is currently a Council Member of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Bangladesh and a Vice President of the Chittagong Stock Exchange Ltd. He was the immediate past Chairman of Bangladesh Shipping Agents' Association and of Port Users'

budtobloominthedaystocome.