Tribute

Remembering Guru Kelucharan Mahapatra

Exquisite range of stances

SHARMILA BONDHOPADHAYA

ODISSI is recognised today as one of the classical dance forms of India. However, Odissi, as it is known today, is not precisely an extant ancient form of dance. Rather it is a reconstruction based on the Gotipua Nritya and Mahari dances of Orissa. One of the main architects of this contemporary Odissi repertoire and vocabulary was Guru Kelucharan Mahapatra.

His recent demise leaves a void in the world of dance. But it is a void competently filled by Kelucharan's worthy pupils, for the Guru was a teacher par excellence. A few of his able students who themselves are recognised as worthy Gurus are Madhavi Mudgal, Kumkum Mohanty, Alok Kanungo and Paushali Chattopadhyaya. It was in the late 1980s through one of Kelucharan's students, Sani Mahapatra, that Dhaka's dancers first stepped into the world of Odissi. The exquisitely graceful tribhanga, the chowka, and pallavis were painstakingly taught to a class consisting of few of Dhaka's well-known dancers such as Minu Huq, Tamanna Rahman and myself. This was continued later by Ipsita Behura.

It was, of course, my great fortune to be able to take part in a 15-day workshop on Odissi conducted by Guru Kelucharan himself. The style and its exquisite range of stances took a different dimension through Gurujii's crystal clear execution of steps and his explanation of the inner dynamics of the style. We are basically Manipuri

Sharmila Bondhopadhaya: I hope to emulate my Guru as long as I dance dancers and the stance of Manipuri remains embedded almost in our psyche. It was Gurujii's painstaking demonstration of the differences in stance and style that gave me a complete understanding of the Odissi dance form. The other remarkable feature of that workshop was Gurujii's complete disregard for giving all of us equal time and hierarchy and his eagerness to teach each participant to perfection, irrespective of their years and experience in the field of Odissi. Some of the other participants were Sujata Misra, Dona Ganguly, Rina Jana, all Odissi dancers of repute. To this day I remain grateful to Gurujii Guru Kelucharan Mahapatra was born in Raghurapur, a village in Orissa in 1926. He belonged to a family of patachitra painters who used to paint patachitras of Lord vJagannath. He started learning Gotipua Nritya and Pakhawaj under the great gurus, Mohan Sunder Deva Goswami and Pankaj Charan Das at an early age. He performed with a Rasleela troupe before joining the theatre.

After Indian independence, he started to work to popularise Gotipua Nritya and the Mahari dance. His creative ability is very evident in his choreography, while it is also informed by his study of ancient scriptures and sculpture in the temples of Orissa. Guru Kelucharan Mahapatra's attitude towards dance was, in essence, devotional; to him dance was not so much a vocation as it was an expression of life. The late Sanjukta Panigrahi was one of the first of Gurujii's disciples to receive international acclaim in the Odissi style.

Today, though Odissi still has room for popularity in Bangladesh, a small group of dancers remain devoted to the style. Minu Huq conducts Odissi classes in Dhaka. Further, it is the efforts of two young dancers, Benazir Salam Shumi (Dhaka) and Proma Abanti (Chittagong), which have given a new lease of life to Odissi.

Documentary

Bangladesh premiere of documentary about Ahmadiyya Muslims

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

MUSLIMS or Heretics? a documentary about persecution of Ahmadiyya Muslims, was screened at Goethe Institute on Thursday, April 15. The screening was organised by Dristhitpat, a US based Bangladeshi expatriate organisation focused on human rights issues, and Bangladesh-based DRIK.

The director of the film, New York-based Naem Mohaieem, is Editor of Shobak.Org and Associate Editor of Progressive Muslim website Altmuslim.com. Explaining his reasons for making the documentary, he said, 'In the US, we are active in campaigns to protect Muslim and Arab immigrant rights, especially during post 9/11 crackdown through Special Registration, Deportation and racial profiling. In North America and Europe, we are a marginalized minority. Yet, in Bangladesh, we are the majority -- and other minorities are facing difficulties. If I am going to protest what's happening to Muslims in the West, I also have to protest what is happening in Bangladesh.'

The event attracted a full house, with many people standing in the aisles during the screening. Among people in the audience were Dr. Shahdin Malik (BRAC University), Dr. Faustina Pereira, Barrister Sara Hossain, Sajjad Sharif (Prothom Alo), filmmaker Morshedul Islam, Khushi Kabir, Hameeda Hossain, journalist Govinda Shah, and Moinuddin Khan Badal.

Introducing the film, Asif Saleh of Dristhitpat said, 'Diaspora Bengalis are a resource for progressive movements in Bangladesh. Dristhitpat is non-partisan and not aligned with any of the political parties of Bangladesh.' It is worth noting that Dristhitpat has attacked human rights abuses by both the AL and BNP government. Dristhitpat's previous projects included fundraising campaigns for journalist Tipu Sultan (attacked by Jinal Hazari during AL government), Hindu villagers of Annadaprasad (attacked after 2001 elections) and women veterans of 1971.

Naem Mohaieem, who is also New York correspondent for The Daily Star, spoke to our reporter after the film: 'As a progressive Muslim, I feel it's essential that we defend the rights of all minorities. The Islamic extremists are using the Ahmadiyya issue as a Trojan horse -- their ultimate intention is to push through draconian measures like Blasphemy Law, and eventually lead us to a fundamentalist State.'

A scene from the documentary

'Muslims or Heretics?' received a community service award from New York University Law Students Association.
