

ALL FOR A MORSEL OF FOOD

HUNGER prompts them to leave their sweet homes. They flock to the capital in quest of jobs to feed the hungry mouths at home. People from their villages across the country stay here for a certain period like the migratory birds. Most of them with an agricultural background join jobs in industries, construction, transport and other sectors in the city. Many of them having little skill risk their lives just to earn their livelihood by doing risky works. Study says the male serve as day-labourers, while most of the female 'migrants' work in garment industries.
