

CEC reiterates army watch

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Chief Election Commissioner (CEC) MA Syed yesterday said there is no alternative to deployment of army personnel at every polling centre for the Dhaka-10 by-polls to be free and fair.

"The government should deploy army personnel in line with the Election Commission's decision. We've made the decision considering demands of the voters and contesting candidates," the CEC told private TV channel ATN Bangla yesterday at Zia International Airport prior to his departure from Dhaka to Washington.

The CEC will return home on August 16. Election Commissioner Safur Rahman will work as acting CEC until Syed returns.

The CEC on June 15 sent a letter to Prime Minister Khaleda Zia asking to deploy army personnel at each of the 103 polling centres.

The EC is yet to receive any response from the government. The CEC, however, said he is optimistic that the government will respond positively.

The CEC said it is his scheduled family visit and has no link to the by-polls of Dhaka-10 on July 1 and Gazipur-2 on August 1.

Correction

The Daily Star news-story headlined "Thai Airways to manage Ctg airport" carried two inadvertent mistakes yesterday. It said the Chittagong airport incurred an annual loss of Tk 45 crore in stead of Tk 4 crore. Another part of the story read the cabinet purchase committee rejected a proposal to carry out a 450 megawatt Sirajganj power plant project. Actually, the proposal for the power plant was dropped from the committee meeting.

Incentives offered to perk up poultry

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The government yesterday decided to provide a range of incentives including loan facilities to reinvigorate the country's poultry sector that was hard hit by last year's public panic over bird flu.

A meeting participated by Finance Minister M Saifur Rahman, Fisheries and Livestock Minister Abdullah Al Noman, bankers concerned and poultry industry representatives yesterday decided that public sector banks will reschedule default loans as well as hand out fresh loans to defaulter poultry farms.

According to the decision, a defaulter poultry farm borrower will now be able to reschedule the defaulted loan by making a down payment of 10-20 percent of the principal loan amount. In this case, the lending bank will hold one year's interest on the rescheduled loan as a 'block account'.

The decision also makes loan defaulter poultry farms eligible to get fresh bank loans.

At yesterday's meeting, the finance minister approved a proposal to bestow 20 percent rebate on power tariff for agro-based industries, including the poultry farms. He also agreed to withdraw a budget proposal of 7.5 percent import duty on poultry medicine.

Poultry sector representatives said, following a press report on presence of toxicity in poultry feed, many small farms had to shut down. The industry was further dealt with a severe blow last year when bird flu scare gripped the world, including Bangladesh's poultry consumers.

75 killed in wave of Iraqi attacks

3 US soldiers among dead

REUTERS, Baghdad

Rebels bent on disrupting a hand-over to Iraqi rule bloodied five cities yesterday with coordinated assaults on local security forces in which about 75 people, including three U.S. soldiers, were killed.

The violence in Baquba, Falluja, Ramadi, Mosul and Baghdad intensified a sustained campaign by Iraqi insurgents and foreign militants to sabotage Iraq's formal transition from U.S.-led occupation to an interim government in six days' time.

More than 200 people were wounded.

In Mosul, 240 miles north of Baghdad, car bombings on police buildings rocked the city, killing at least 44 people and wounding 216, the Health Ministry said. Fighting in Anbar province, which includes Falluja and Ramadi, killed at least nine people and wounded 27. Clashes around Baquba killed 13 and wounded 15, the ministry said.

At least seven large explosions shook Mosul and local television ordered residents to stay at home. Police blocked off all major roads and announced a dusk-to-dawn curfew.

Apart from the Iraqi casualties, the U.S. military said an American soldier had been killed and three wounded in the blasts. It said a security guard was also killed.

Gunfire rattled across Mosul as insurgents fought running battles with U.S. troops and Iraqi police.

At least four members of Iraq's national guard were killed and two civilians wounded by a car bomb blast in southern Baghdad, an officer in the paramilitary force said. Hospital sources said five people were killed in the blast.

ZARQAWI'S FINGERPRINTS
Scores of black-clad gunmen, some claiming loyalty to Jordanian militant Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, attacked a police station and other government buildings in Baquba, 60 km (40 miles) northwest of Baghdad, in a dawn assault.

A U.S. military spokesman said two American soldiers had been killed in an ambush. U.S. forces had responded with air strikes after gunmen captured the civic center and attacked another government building. Two insurgents were killed.

Charges on judiciary traded in Sangsad

Govt interferes in judges work: AL; AL robbed judicial independence: BNP

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Key ruling party BNP and the main opposition Awami League (AL) swapped allegations about interference in the judiciary in parliament yesterday.

Speaking on points of order, AL lawmakers accused the government of interfering in judges' work and pegged as untrue Law Minister Moudud Ahmed's statement in the Jatiya Sangsad on Wednesday on the writ petition file by a district and sessions judge.

The treasury bench members counter-charged the previous AL government with robbing the independence of the judiciary and excoriated a stick procession led by former home minister Mohammad Nasim against judges.

The debate opened when Nasim took floor on a point of order at the beginning of yesterday's sitting and accused the government of putting pressure on District and Sessions Judge Shaikh Jahangir Husain to set free some notorious criminals, including Sweden Aslam.

"But the law minister told parliament on Wednesday that the judge in his writ petition did not mention government pressure on him. The law minister gave untrue information to the House," Nasim asserted.

"Judges are facing difficulties in discharging their constitutional duties because of naked interference in the judiciary by the government."

He said two public prosecutors at a press conference brought allegations against the judge in an unprecedented example.

He said opposition deputies submitted several notices demanding discussion in parliament on important issues, including the

AL for 2-shift JS debate from Sunday

Main opposition Awami League (AL) yesterday proposed the key ruling party BNP for a two-shift parliament session from Sunday to enable more lawmakers to debate the proposed budget for the fiscal 2004-05 slated for passage on June 30.

In an out-of-the-House parley in the presence of Speaker Jamir Uddin Sircar at the Sangsad Bhaban, Opposition Chief Whip Abdus Shahid demanded allocation of 50 percent of the debate time to the AL deputies.

Sircar told the negotiators that parliament dedicated 13 hours to discussing the proposed budget until Wednesday, of which opposition deputies got four hours and 17 minutes.

The 96-page 8th Anniversary Issue of Star Weekend Magazine comes out today.

MASS ARRESTS

Govt mum a month after HC deadline

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The government has yet to reply to the High Court's April 27 rule that asked for a report in three weeks on names and particulars of people arrested in a wholesale sweep and the steps for their release.

Rights-groups challenged mass arrests in the High Court, a day after the government halted a clampdown in Dhaka that arrested over 7,000 people in nine days since April 18.

The court also asked the government to explain why Section 86 of Dhaka Metropolitan Police Ordinance, under which police made the arrests, should not be declared contrary to the constitution.

The deadline set by the court expired on May 18. An official at the Attorney General's Office says the government will send the reply when the issue is listed for hearing.

But the counsels for petitioners say the issue has nothing to do with being listed and the government should have submitted the court requirement to the Supreme Court Registrar's Office by the deadline.

Barrister Tanjib Ul Alam, one of the counsels for the petitioners, told The Daily Star that the government did not comply with the court order, adding: "We will inform the court about it on Saturday."

A coalition government policymaker said the rule lost its effect with the mass arrests coming to an end and arrestees released. "Still, we will reply to the order as the court issued it," he said.

"We will provide documents on a plot designed to overthrow the government, creating anarchy which led the government to take administrative measures, including arrest of some people to protect national interest," he added.

Vehicle requisition spree goes high

Owners left to buy release of their transports

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Police under cover of so-called requisition use about 300 private vehicles of businesspeople a day by force to carry out anticrime sweeps in Dhaka, flouting a home ministry directive, officials said.

"Most of the vehicles the police use are private microbuses. The vehicles are more than needed. They could run anticrime operations with fewer vehicles," a home ministry official said, asking not to be named.

State Minister for Home Lutfozzaman Babar ordered the police headquarters to use vehicles of government offices in times of emergency, not private vehicles.

But a senior police officer alleged: "We did not use the vehicles only for us all the time. The home ministry also asked us to do so for its own purpose and we have just carried out its order."

Police took to coercion apparently for two reasons: to take bribe from the vehicle owner on his refusal to hand over his car and pocket part of the government money for fuel, the official said.

"It is a clandestine dealing between dishonest policemen to earn money out of it," the official said, adding different police stations, Detective Branch, Special Branch, Criminal Investigation Department and Rapid Action Battalion all are part of the under-hand dealing.

The cost of using requisitioned vehicles goes higher and the government pays for it, as police disinform the authorities that they burn 100 litres of fuel for a vehicle in two days and the driver is paid Tk 50 a day.

Miazi, a driver whose vehicle was taken away several times, alleged the police once forced schoolboys out of their vehicle on their way home and used it in an anticrime drive.

US FACT-FINDING MISSION

Cops bar locals to talk freely

ANWAR ALI, Rajshahi

Police controlled the visit of three US embassy officials to the northwest to gather information about militant activities of an Islamist outfit, the officials alleged yesterday, hours before they left Rajshahi for Dhaka.

Law enforcers, who apparently supported the Jagrata Muslim Janata Bangladesh (JMJB), closely guarded the officials scaring villagers into hiding information about the group's vigilante operatives blamed for a series of killings in northwestern districts since April 1.

Villagers in the JMJB bastion with close ties to its dreaded operations commander Bangla Bhai told the officials that nobody existed as Bangla Bhai nor there was evidence of killing by his men.

Talking exclusively to The Daily Star Wednesday night, the US embassy's Political Officer Paul S. Ague said: "We have so far learnt visiting the villages that JMJB came into being to get rid of outlaws and it was successful."

"Police were always with us ... they took us to the families victimised at the hands of outlaws and they resisted the people and local journalists who were willing to talk," he said over coffee with this correspondent in the Parjatan Motel in Rajshahi city.

"They (police) told us about security problems in the villages when we wanted to talk to people freely," said Ague, who was accompanied by Regional Security Officer David Modley and Bangladeshi Press Officer Muhammad Ali.

The team arrived in Rajshahi on Tuesday to gather first-hand information about the JMJB atrocities that grabbed sharp media spotlight and visited Bagmara upazila in Rajshahi and Raninagar and Atrai in Naogaon until Wednesday evening.

Modley said most people the team met during the visit suffered at the hands of outlaws, popularly
