Wedding Festival

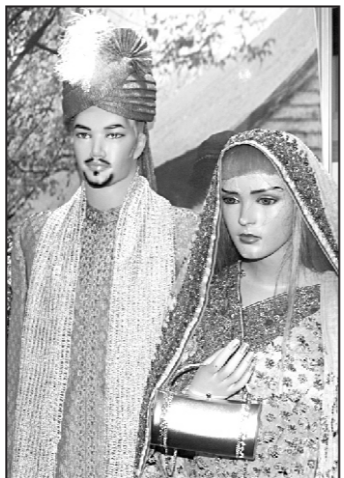

A venture first of its kind

ELITA KARIM

THE conventional Banglali notion that weddings are always better off taking place in winter, will probably take a back seat pretty soon.

This fascinating event included various business houses displaying their attractive products and services under one roof.

Monika's Badhon, a matchmaking business house, was there with their 'Don't feel shy' and 'Looking for someone' logos.

waiting for a perfect match. Dulhan exhibited its collection of Gaye Holud requirements, starting from outfits to the traditional mehendi designs.

Sweetmax was displaying and also selling their sweetmeats whereas Hertz Rent-a-Car was displaying vehicles decorated with flowers and colourful ribbons.

HSBC offered wedding loans and wedding furniture loans, while Kaniz Almas of Persona was collecting dates for bridal make-up.

Shamon a little boy and girl were dressed in wedding outfits and made to sit on wedding thrones, making an absolutely adorable pair.

Biyer Adda or a Wedding Remembrance was held at the venue, where celebrities spoke of their 'happily married' lives.

Some say that marriages are arranged in heaven. However, by the looks of this successful event, at least a few prospective brides and grooms might have been inspired to come together and tie their knots for good.

Karnakatha

An adapted play from the Mahabharata

ABAYAB Theatre staged Karnakatha on June 27 at the Experimental Theatre Stage.

Many Bangladeshi modern dramatists write contemporary plays based on the Kurukshetra War. Their aim is to show the oppression of the weaker powers by the super powers.

Playwright Tanvir Ahmed Sydney has adapted the drama from the Mahabharata. The section is the 'Kurukshetra War' when Kaurab hero.

Karna decides to kill Arjun, the representative of the Pandavs. Sydney's Karnakatha starts with the ritual songs to show respect to the epic.

Karna the hero belongs to the low cast but outstrips any warrior. He offers to duel with Arjun, the representative of the upper cast.

But when the Kurukshetra War starts, Karna gets a chance to take revenge from the upper cast people and Arjun, in particular.

However, the head of the gods Indra, being partial to Arjun, deceives Karna into giving the Kabojkundalee (protective talisman) provided by his father the Sun God.

During the Kurukshetra war the class discrimination and the biased tendency of the gods was explicit in the play Karnakatha.

Krishna, the guiding light of the Pandavs, tells all the gods to support Arjun so that he can beat Karna. And Arjun, with the advice of Krishna, kills Karna, in violation of the code of war.

Mohammed Jasimuddin as the director of the play is very much narrative. Sometimes it appears that the audience is listening to the recitation of the Mahabharata, not watching a play.

choreography. An orange cloth, covering the eyes of the character Gandhari should have been black instead, according to the myth.

Shahidul Haq Khan, the set designer, has used the total stage as well as the upper space of the Experimental Theatre Stage, which is meant for the audience.

The light design of Abdul Halim Pramanik was a total disaster. Due to lack of visibility, which is a basic requirement for light design, the artistes often remained out of focus.

The music composition of the play was, however, enchanting.

Parvin Aktar Paru, as the narrator of the play, gave an excellent performance. Her voice modulation to narrate the total play deserves high praise. The other performers were monotonous.

'I wish to protest against fundamentalism throughout my life' Kamal Lohani

HARUN UR RASHID

JUNE 26 was the 70th birth anniversary of renowned journalist-cultural personality Kamal Lohani. The Birth Anniversary Celebration National Committee organised a ceremony to accord reception to Lohani on June 27 at the National Museum auditorium.

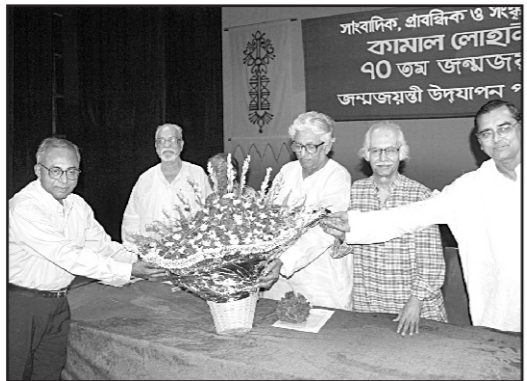

The programme started with a dance composition by renowned danseuse Dipa Khondokar and her troupe.

National Professor Kabir Choudhury, the Convenor of the Committee, along with political figure Rashed Khan Menon, Gazilul Haque, poet Rabiul Hussain, then ushered Kamal Lohani and his wife DipTEE Lohani on the stage.

Kamal Lohani's life has been an eventful one with a political and cultural orientation. Born in 1934, Lohani's involvement in politics began through participation in a rally protesting the killing of students in the historic Language Movement in Pabna, where he studied.

After several years of political activities and consequent arrests, Lohani came to Dhaka during the mid-1950s and started his career as a journalist in the Dainik Millat. Later he also worked for the Dainik Azaad, the Pakistan Feature Syndicate, the weekly Swaraj edited by Faiz Ahmad, and the Dainik Bangabarta that supported the ideologies of Bhashani.

He was also actively involved with the Shadhin Bangla Betar Kendro, where he did news casting, reading slogans, recitation and oratory. He was given the charge of the Dhaka centre of Bangladesh Betar by the then Prime Minister Tajuddin Ahmad on December 25, 1971.

An amazing part of Lohani's life was spent as a dancer. He took lessons on dance from eminent master GA Mannan. Under his direction Lohani performed a dance drama on Nakshi Kanthar Maathof poet Jasimuddin and travelled to the then West Pakistan and countries of the Middle East.

In the second phase of the programme, a cultural presentation was conducted by renowned singers and dancers.

Lohani, in his speech, said, 'I don't want to live for a 100 years, but wish to remain strong enough to protest against fundamentalism throughout my life.'

Katherine Hepburn: 'I'm a personality as well as an actress'

On June 29 last year, Hollywood lost one of its brightest stars—Katherine Hepburn. With films such as Adam's Rib, Little Women and Morning Glory to her credit, she occupied pride of place in the film world.

'I'm a personality as well as an actress,' Hepburn once said. 'Show me an actress who isn't a personality, and you'll show me a woman who isn't a star.'

Hepburn's fascination for acting goes back to her childhood. As a youngster, she used to take up odd jobs to pay for tickets to the latest silent movies.

The early years on stage were hard and she received her share of brickbats. An early appearance in The Lake, prompted the famous remark of Dorothy Parker that Hepburn 'ran the gamut of emotions from A to B.'

By the early 1930s she was making her mark in Hollywood. She turned down her first contract offer from Paramount Pictures and then made extravagant salary demands when approached by RKO Pictures.

Well known for her on and off screen relationship with famous actor Spencer Tracy, the duo worked in films such as Woman of the Year (which earned her another Oscar nomination) and Adam's Rib.

She lived life on her own terms. In her words: 'I don't regret anything I've ever done as long as I enjoyed it at the time.'

Drama Festival in full swing

The organisers of the drama festival have reason to be happy. As they say, in each and every show, the sales of the tickets have far exceeded their expectations.

On the fifth day, people from different segments of the society came to enjoy Natyafaj's drama. Three spectators named Mohammed Mokhlesur Rahman, Mohammed Delwar Hossain and Khalil Bapari were among the audience, who are 'fish traders and not frequent theatregoers' as Khalil said.

Three rows ahead of the fish traders, were also two Frenchmen named Farice and Mireille. 'Language is the basic problem for us. In fact we have not understood any thing of the play,' said Farice.

Spectators eagerly waiting for the show to begin at the hall. Bangladeshi and the French drama. In France the theatrical groups also play live orchestra like you do.
