Right rehabilitation to up agriculture

Exports to lose anyhow, say economists

REJAUL KARIM BYRON

If the government fails to properly implement post-flood agriculture rehabilitation programme, it can push the economy off the track and greatly affect GDP (gross domestic product) growth, economists say.

But successful implementation of rehabilitation programme using the experience of 1998 post-flood situation could lead to bumper agricultural production. Some losses are however inevitable in the export sector, they add.

The on-going flood, if it continues further, will specially hurt agriculture and industry -- mainly export-oriented industry, economists think.

It is possible to turn the tables for the agriculture sector while it is also possible to minimise losses in the industrial sector through timely action of the government, economists Dr Zaid Bakht, Dr Mustafizur Rahman and Dr Atiur Rahman noted.

Back in 1998-99, GDP growth slid down to 4.87 percent from the previous two years' steady rate of over 5 percent. But agricultural growth in 1998 that saw the massive floods was 3.24 percent -- a jump from the previous year's 1.63 percent. And 1999 saw even a better agricultural growth -- 6.92 percent.

The GDP target of the current fiscal year is 6 percent while according to the provisional estimates, the previous fiscal year's GDP was 5.23 percent.

In the last fiscal year, agriculture contributed to the GDP Tk 42,630 crore, of which crops and vegetables contributed Tk 31,189 crore.

Agriculture Extension Department fears agriculture sector will be the worst-hit in this year's floods. The latest estimates put crop damage at Tk 2291 crore and the figure is rapidly increasing day by day.

"The flood will severely damage seeds and seedbeds. This loss can be recovered through timely and appropriate rehabilitation programme," observes Dr Zaid Bakht, senior research director of Bangladesh Institute of Development Studies (BIDS).

On agriculture ministry's plan to help 12 lakh small farmers, he said, "It will not work if the ministry does not get into action immediately after announcing the project. In addition, the Prime Minister's Office itself should monitor it regularly to Biman takes passengers for a ride, or two!

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Officials of Biman Bangladesh Airlines yesterday made passengers of its Dhaka-Syedpur flight, which ran more than three hours behind schedule, twice to board the wrong aircraft.

Infuriated passengers said the trouble started when the authorities announced that the flight scheduled for 8:30 in the morning had been delayed and would instead take off at 10:15am.

As they were taken to the terminal to board the plane, the officials told them it was not the Syedpur-bound plane. They immediately took the passengers to another plane. As the passengers were about to board the plane, they were again told that it too was not the right one and took the passengers back to the terminal.

Authorities then told the passengers that the plane would fly at 11:30am, putting the delay down to technical faults.

"After all the hassles, we were left with no option but to wait until 11:30am," said Monzoor Hossain, one of the annoyed passengers. "I am shocked to see that Biman runs under such a poor management despite its severe image crisis."

The incensed passengers scuffled with the Biman officials at the airport, sources said. The flight finally took off at 11:45am.

"It was a lapse on our part," said a top official of the Airport Service Wing on condition of anonymity. "It's our failure but it cannot be accepted in the (aviation) industry."

The official said the incident occurred as the official concerned mistook a clearance message over his walkie-talkie. "He should have cross-checked it," he said, adding, "We have instantly showcased him."

Fazle Sobhani, general manager of Central Control, however, claimed the flight was scheduled at 10:15am and delayed due to technical fault with the aircraft that flew from Sylhet and was scheduled to fly

The release of Mohammed

Palestine PM ends standoff with Arafat

REUTERS, Ramallah

Palestinian Prime Minister Ahmed Qurie withdrew his resignation yesterday after Yasser Arafat granted him some powers to carry out reforms, easing a paralyzing leadership crisis, officials said.

Qurie's chief of staff said he had won effective control over police and internal security agencies, part of a security apparatus whose chaos and corruption is seen by international mediators as an obstacle to peacemaking with Israel.

Arafat's move, initially disclosed by a pro-reform committee of legislators after a meeting with the president, came after an unprecedented explosion of unrest over high-level inaction on demands for anti-corruption reforms.

But Arafat, a former guerrilla leader, has not honored similar promises in the past. Tuesday's deal leaves him in charge of national security and intelligence which encompass the bulk of Palestinian security personnel.

"The president rejected my resignation and I will (now) comply," Qurie told reporters after 10 days of turmoil that raised fears of a descent into anarchy in the West Bank and Gaza.

"I hope I will be up to this confidence and cooperate with (Arafat) in
