An evening of nostalgia

Solo recital by the virtuoso Sohrab Hossain

SADYA AFREEN MALICK

THE octogenarian Sohrab Hossain is an artiste at peace with himself. No wonder, considering his commitment to music and his acclaim as a household name for his rendition of Nazrul songs.

On September 22, The Daily Star caught up with Sohrab Hossain. On the cards was an evening of Nazrul songs, with illustrations and flashbacks, presented by him at the Kabibhaban auditorium at Dhanmondi, Dhaka. The performance was held under the auspices of the Nazrul Institute.

Executive Director of Nazrul Institute, poet Abdul Mannan Syed welcomed the eminent artiste on stage. He said that it was the second such session of solo recitals by an eminent artiste. Nazrul enthusiasts, scholars, researchers and singers also took part in a lively discussion session in the intervals between two songs. The auditorium, almost vacant at the beginning, was soon filled to the brim by an enthusiastic crowd from all walks of life.

Going back to his early days, Sohrab recalled his fascination with the music played on the gramophone records. 'I was so desperate to attend theatre that I even had to sell my mother's valuables to buy the tickets! The Minerva Theatre, in West Bengal was a popular source of entertainment at that time. During the interval of the plays Sirajuddowla and Laili Majnu, reputed singers like Angur Bala, Indu Bala used to perform songs,' said a nostalgic Sohrab. 'Gradually, I could say the drama lines of the characters by heart, not to speak of the songs. This is how my love for Nazrul songs started,' he added.

Continuing on the same line, he said, 'I hardly knew then about who the composer or writer was behind the songs. I remember one fine morning there was hustle and bustle all around. Everyone was rushing towards the Ranaghat bazaar. There was an air of breathless excitement. The one thing I remember from that first encounter with the poet, Nazrul, was his wild locks of hair and deep inquisitive eyes. Little did I know then that someday I would be so inspired by the immense creativity of the poet and that his songs would be my ultimate identity.'

Another of his indelible memories is his first lesson during the pre-partition days, in Nazrul songs from Zainul Abedin, a resident of Ranaghat Subdivision in West Bengal. He continued his musical learning under the guidance of Kiron Dey Chowdhury and Abbassuddin Ahmed, the undisputed master of folk songs. Ustad M Hossain Khuroso gave him lessons on classical songs. Later, Girin Chakravarty gave him musical lessons on Nazrul songs and Shudhir Lal Chakravarty on modern songs. He also learnt a great deal from the gramophone songs of Angur Bala and Indu Bala. In fact, there is hardly any trend of Nazrul

Sangeet that he has not performed.

After partition Sohrab Hossain settled in Dhaka. From then on he made an entry in the music scene through recitals in the radio.

In addition to his reflection on the past, Sohrab Hossain rendered kirtan, ghazals and humorous songs with eloquence. However, he complained about his ill health and not being able to perform as before. He sang Amaar Hori namey ruchi karon porinamey luchi, Mor pria hobey esho rani, Nirjoney shokhi, Chal Chal and other popular songs.

He also recalled his heyday. While performing songs at the Chitra cinema hall for the first time in 1945, in Kolkata he gained popularity. In addition, he earned accolades and medals for his single-minded dedication to preserving and performing Nazrul songs. Later he was awarded the Swadhinata Puroshkar by the Bangladesh government in 1980, Nazrul Padak, 1982(Nazrul Academy), Nazrul Academy, 1981(Churulia, India) to name a few.

Kazi Nazrul Islam has undoubtedly enriched the world of Bangla songs with his creative genius. However, it is through gifted artistes like Sohrab Hossain that people continue to love and remember the artistry of Nazrul.

Nagarik Natyangan visits India

ERSHAD KAMOL

Recently a 37-member Nagarik Natyangan team led by Lucky Inam visited Kolkata to participate in a drama festival. The meet was organised by a theatrical group named Bhubishwat. In the 10-day long tour they staged two plays Shoroma and Golmatha Chokha Matha. Lucky Inam explained, 'Bhubishwat invited us to stage our new production and another popular production in the festival. That is why we staged Shoroma as the popular play on August 27 at Modhushudan Stage and Golmatha Chokha Matha as the new play at the Academy Stage on August 28. On the following day we held a seminar to make a comparison of the theatre practice in Bangladesh and India.'

Commenting on the selection of Nagarik Natyangan from Bangladesh, Lucky said, 'Earlier we invited them to take part in our drama festival in January last titled Hridayoy Tane

A sequence from the play Golmatha Chokha Matha

Rhidoy Pane. Now, it was their turn to invite us.'

The total expense of the 37 member-team was borne by the organisers. We reciprocate in the same way.' For the Kolkata theatre audience the staging of the two Bangladeshi plays was a welcome change and a milestone.

Serial Biraj Bou conveys a powerful message --Aruna Biswas

NOVERA DEEPTA

Talented actress Aruna Biswas is yet to shoot her long planned drama serial Biraj Bou based on a famous story by the legendary novelist Sharatchandra Chattopadhyaya. She says the shoot has been delayed by the rainy weather.

The cast is almost final; Aruna will play the lead role Biraj, Litu Anam will be Pitambar while Adhora, a very promising new comer, will play the Chhoto Bou. Ahmed Rubel or Tarek Anam will enact the role of Nilambar, husband of Biraj.

Under the banner of Jatra Vision, the drama serial will be shot in an idyllic spot in the village Jabar, in Manikganj. It is also the hometown of Aruna's father, an eminent Jatra artiste Amalendu Biswas. The equipment for the drama like palki, bajra and the traditional costumes have also been readied.

Adapted by Mannan Hira, the story is about a beautiful woman Biraj who is very devoted to her husband. Like many other typical Bangalee rural families, Biraj's husband Nilambar has a conflict with his younger brother Pitambar. Meanwhile, the beautiful Biraj becomes the target of a wicked zamindar and is kidnapped by him in the dead of night. However, she escapes from the clutches of the evil landlord and manages to go far away from her village. As rumours go around that Biraj ran away with the zamindar, Nilambar sinks into misery. After a long wait for his wife, he decides to go on a pilgrimage. At the end of the story Nilambar encounters his long lost love. However fate has other plans because Biraj is too sick to survive.

Aruna Biswas and Adhora

Aruna said, 'People always love to read Sharatchandra Chattopadhyaya's novels. But the situation is different in the case of the visual media. For instance, Champa Dangar Bou was not a hit after all, which is quite unfortunate.'

Aruna is a fierce proponent of the need to preserve the traditional Bangalee culture and values. The drama Biraj Bou, effectively conveys this message through its depiction of rural life in Bangladesh.

Rabeya Khatun's Onnesha on Alpha Bangla

CULTURAL CORRESPONDENT

Onnesha, based on the novel of Bangladeshi author Rabeya Khatun, will be telecast on the Indian satellite channel Alpha Bangla soon. Reshmi Mitra directs the drama while Indrani Dutta, Mita Chatterjee, Shoibal Bhattacharya, Shirin Sarkar and others are among the cast. The story is based on a promising writer Sultana, who falls in love with a boy named Nazrul. The drama, to be telecast on September 26 at 8:00pm, is a typical love story.

SHORT TAKES

Pakistani film Khamosh Paani set for Indian release

Pakistani film Khamosh Paani, which has won several awards and laurels on the international film festival circuit, is slated for its commercial release in India in October.

Shot entirely in Pakistan, this Sabiya Sumar-directed film stars Indian actress Kiron Kher in the lead role about a Hindu girl forced to stay in Pakistan after Partition and later converted to Islam.

According to Shyam Shroff of Shrinagar Films, the distributors of the Pakistani-venture, the film being produced with German and French collaboration made its distribution in India easier.

The plotline of the film, based in Pakistan, revolves round the pervasive influence of religious leaders on common Pakistanis.

The film also has scenes of Sikh pilgrimage site Panja Sahib, which will prove an added attraction for the Delhi and Punjab audience.

Married or Not, Britney Prompts Another Media Stir

Did the world's most famous pop star, Britney Spears, try to avoid annoying paparazzi by staging 'secret' nuptials last weekend -- a month ahead of her scheduled dream day in October? Or did she take the media for a ride by staging a fake wedding and selling the pictures in an elaborate hoax?

These were the questions swirling about on Wednesday as People Magazine published 'exclusive' wedding photographs and rival US Weekly claimed it had a document proving the whole thing was a fake.

Spears' New York publicist Leslie Sloane said Spears and Kevin Federline 'are married. It is not a fake anything.' But Spears admits no wedding license has been filed with authorities.
