Pvt varsities urged to give up commercial attitude

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

State Minister for Education ANM Ehsanul Haque Milon yesterday criticised the private universities for low standard of education and called for giving up their commercial attitude.

The government permitted the universities to accommodate increased number of students and develop a quality education system, but the entrepreneurs could not meet the demand, he said at the launching ceremony of University of Liberal Arts Bangladesh (ULAB) at a city hotel.

Now the government has become strict in approving private universities, he said, adding that however, if any entrepreneur comes up with the vision of imparting standard education, the government will welcome them.

Health Minister Dr Khandaker Mosharraf Hossain said the private universities also do not follow the guidelines properly.

They do not have own campuses and most of them start functioning with only two subjects, he added.

The minister also said these institutions mainly depend on part-time teachers.

Only a few, out of 52 private universities, maintain a minimum standard of education, he said.

However, both of them appreciated the University of Liberal Arts Bangladesh, saying that this is the only university that started the academic session on its own campus from the very beginning.

Prof Rafiqul Islam, pro-vice chancellor of ULAB, said the university aimed to impart indigenous knowledge in global context to prepare the students to face the challenges of globalisation.

The institution will give special emphasis on basic research and publications, he added.

Vice Chancellor Kazi Shahid Ahmed said three more campuses of the university are under construction in Savar, Rayerbazar and Panchagrah.

The university awarded more than 100 students who secured GPA-5 in HSC examination this year.

'Fiscal management in Bangladesh is the best among LDCs'

BSS, New York

Finance Minister M Saifur Rahman said Bangladesh would achieve the United Nations (UN) millennium goals for 2015 in primary education and women empowerment by 2005.

He quoted reports of the World Bank (WB) and the International Monetary Fund (IMF) as saying that the financial management in Bangladesh is the best among the least development countries (LDCs).

The minister was speaking at a function organised by the Sonali Exchange on the occasion of the inauguration of its online money transfer service here on Thursday.

Saifur was critical of those who were spreading propaganda at home and abroad against the country by terming it a non-functional state.

"Bangladesh by any extent could not be termed a non-functional state and the BNP is not an ineffective political party. Rather, those who suffered debacle in the general election in 2001, bagging only 56 seats, down from 142 in previous parliament, are the failed ones," he added.

Finance Secretary Zakir Ahmed Khan, Bangladesh High Commissioner to Canada Rafique Ahmed Khan, Consul General of Bangladesh Consulate in NY Mohammad Mohsin Ali and Press Minister of Bangladesh mission in the UN M Muhaddes were also present.

More exchange houses will be opened in various countries, including Japan and Korea, if the New York experience was found to be helpful, the minister said, adding that exchange houses have already been set up in Italy and Singapore.

He also called on the expatriate Bangladeshis to send remittances through the Sonali Exchange as it would ensure benefit for them.

He said the foreign exchange reserve reached 3.3 billion US dollars mark as a result of good financial management in the country.

Agriculture accounted for 22.8 pc of GDP in last fiscal

Experts tell seminar

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Agriculture accounted for about 22.8 percent of GDP in the last fiscal and the rice production dominated the crop sector with an average share of 71 percent of gross output value of all crops, experts said yesterday.

The total demand for rice in 2005 will be 26.67 million metric tons and production requirement of paddy will be 39.80 million metric tons, they said at a seminar on 'Present status and future demand for rice in Bangladesh'.

The Bangladesh Rice Research Institute organised the seminar in Gazipur to mark the International Year of Rice 2004 and the National Rice Day (proposed).

The required production of paddy would stand at 48.69 million metric tons in 2025 to meet the growing demand, the experts said.

They also suggested adopting both short-term and long-term strategies to increase production.

As short-term measures, varietal replacement through modern variety rice, increasing supply of quality seeds and application of improved management practices at farm level can be used to enhance rice production, they said.

They also called for developing hybrid rice variety.

Agriculture Minister MK Anwar attended the seminar as chief guest and Dr AR Gomosta presided over it.

Mohammad Ismail, chairman of BADC, Nurul Alam, chairman of BARC, and Dr M Mohiul Hoque, director general of BRRI, also spoke.

The BRRI also took out a colourful procession to celebrate the day.
