RMG loses edge on no care for local cotton

Lack of research, subsidy, policy lead to import of over 90pc of cotton demand

LITTLE CARE FOR COTTON

Local cotton key to competitive RMG
20 lakh bales imported yearly
1 lakh bale produced locally
Cotton farming profitable, yet neglected
No subsidy for cotton farming
No nat'l policy on cotton

PORIMOL PALMA

Lack of research, subsidy and bio-safety policy marginalised cotton farming, prompting the textile industry to import more than 90 percent of cotton from abroad in a measure that hiked the production cost of readymade garments.

Despite a huge demand for cotton for the textile and garment industries in Bangladesh, the government has apparently taken no significant step to upgrade cotton research and set up a research laboratory to develop better varieties and technology, experts say.

The government did not shape a bio-safety policy to adopt better varieties and technology from other countries, said an official with the Cotton Development Board (CDB), asking not to be named.

By contrast, India took to the genetically-modified crop technology two years ago and is now adopting Israel's agronomic technology. India has declared Rs 60,000 crore (Tk 75,000 crore) in subsidy this year for cotton development.

OMS starts, fails to rein in prices

Sale of rice at a subsidised price of Tk 13 a kg among the economically hard-pressed started yesterday under the government's open market sale (OMS) programme with little impact on the high price of rice in the capital's kitchen markets.

In the wake of public outcry over the skyrocketing prices of rice, the government launched the OMS operation yesterday through 10,700 dealers across the country. Under the programme, a consumer is entitled to procure a maximum of 3kg coarse rice at Tk 13 per day.

But on the first day in the capital, when poor people queued around makeshift OMS centres--rice-laden trucks--to buy rice at lower price, traders at different markets continued to sell rice at high prices. Coarse rice was selling at Tk 17-18 a kg, Najarshail at Tk 19-21 and Minikit at Tk 20-22 yesterday as on the previous days.

All OMS centres in the capital closed by noon as the daily quota of 500kg per dealer were exhausted and hundreds of people returned backempty-handed.

Reports received from many areas said there were no OMS operations in the areas yesterday.

In Dhaka, the government opened 160 OMS centres in 80 Khulna, 20 in Rajshahi, 15 in Barisal, 10 in Sylhet, and 5 and 10 each in each district headquarters, upazila and union.

The food ministry plans to open 30 OMS centres in Chittagong, 25 in

JAIL KILLING CASE
3 busy lobbying for post soon after acquittal

Hectic lobbying has already started for 'proper rehabilitation' of three out of five people acquitted of charges in the historic jail killing case yesterday, sources in the ruling BNP said.

The acquittal of BNP Standing Committee member and lawmaker KM Obaidur Rahman has paved the way for his induction in the cabinet and Jatiya Party (JP) leader Shah Moazzem Hossain's joining the BNP, the sources mentioned.

Moreover, foreign posting of major Khairuzzaman, now an additional secretary in the foreign ministry, is likely to be confirmed as the court verdict yesterday also acquitted him.

"It is now a matter of time to include one in the cabinet, one in BNP and send another to a Bangladesh mission," said a senior BNP leader on condition of anonymity.

JAIL KILLING CASE VERDICT

IO hits back at criticism

JULFIKAR ALI MANIK

Denying allegations of gross flaws in probing Jail Killing Case, Investigation Officer (IO) Abdul Kader Akbar yesterday put the blame on the state side saying he did not get full co-operation from the prosecution after the changeover in state power in 2001.

A day after the judge delivering the verdict accused him of making a 'farical investigation,' Kader said he had done his job with sincerity. "It is the state counsels who lacked sincerity and were reluctant to take my assistance."

The public prosecutor did not do what was necessary for a proper prosecution in such a very special case," he told The Daily Star over phone.

"Since investigation officers play a significant role in a trial, the state side always tries to make their best use during the whole trial process. But unfortunately it did not happen in my case. I was transferred and later sent to forced retirement," Kader said.

Kader, an assistant superintendent of police at the Criminal Investigation Department (CID) who was given the charge of IO in the case in August 1996, was transferred to Barisal in October 2001 immediately after the alliance government assumed office.

Leaders at round table call for reform of caretaker system

Leaders of different political parties including the main opposition Awami League (AL) yesterday demanded an Election Commission (EC) totally free from government influence to ensure holding of the next general elections in a transparent way.

The functions of a caretaker government also have to be specified clearly to avoid criticisms that followed the last three general elections, the leaders said at a roundtable organised by the Jatiya

Samajtantrik Dal (JSD-Inu).

They suggested the EC should have a separate secretariat so that it could discharge its duties without being influenced by the government.

The leaders also agreed to sit for a
