Weaving a dream

First ever Bangladeshi film by children nominated for International EMMY Awards

AFSAR AHMED

THE golden fairy with the globe in her hands' can be ours! No, it's not a dream but the initiation of a dream-come-true, as a Bangladeshi TV production, Amrao Pari, has been nominated in the children and young people category for the most prestigious International Emmy Awards 2004. Made by children on the occasion of the International Children's Day of Broadcasting (ICDB), the 25-minute long Amrao Pari (We Can Be) was aired on ATN Bangla on December 12, 2003.

To celebrate this occasion, a press conference was held recently at the auditorium of Dhaka Reporters' Unity. ATN Bangla Chairman Mahfuzur Rahman, Chief Adviser Asif Bari, Vice President Nawajesh Ali Khan, the thinktank behind the documentary Rowshan Ara-Nipa and UNICEF Bangladesh spokesperson Rezwanul Alam attended the conference. The documentary was screened after the conference.

ICDB celebrates the second Sunday of every December with the slogan 'Tune in to Kids'. In a joint initiative, UNICEF and International Council of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences and Broadcasters around the world air quality TV programmes for and about children.

Last year the team members of Amrao Pari, a programme by children aired on ATN Bangla, made the documentary Amrao Pari depicting the theme 'We can be the Heroes'.

Amrao Pari is a brave story of Abul Khair, a 9 year-old whiz kid, who saved thousands' lives from a possible train accident in 1996 applying his own intelligence. While roaming about the rail tracks, the boy suddenly discovered that the lines were dislocated at a place. And to his utter horror he found that a train was visible at distance. Khair heard that a 'red signal' stops trains. So, he collected a red piece of cloth, tied it on top of a stick, and started waving it to attract the attention of the drivers on the train. Fortunately, they saw the boy and stopped the train. Thus, a large number of train passengers were saved on that day.

Recreating the moment: young Khair waves the red signal to stop the fateful train

Apparently the boy's conscience made him do this. After that incident he was promised many rewards by different government and non-government organisations. But, as fate would have it, everyone has almost forgotten him. However, ATN Bangla has come forward and included Khair into the ATN family.

In 2003, the group of Amrao Pari, comprised of a group of teenage boys and girls, planned to do a documentary on Abul Khair. The team went to Chandpur to find the boy. 'After a prolonged search when we got Khair, we found him working with a welding machine which is a very risky job for any children', said Nipa, the director of the documentary, at the press conference.

Interestingly, everything related to the making of the documentary was perfectly done by the children: Robiul Islam Raju and Khairul Amin Nahin on camera, Riaz Kaiser on video editing, and Fatima Akhter and Dipankar Shekhar as the anchors.

Apart from Amrao Pari, the other three nominees are The Ideal World in Children's Eyes from China, Every Child has the Right to Education from Laos, and International Children's Day of Broadcasting Special from Kenya. The winners of the ICDB award will be announced at the 32nd International Emmy Awards Gala that will take place in New York on November 22.

Shabana Azmi

Stellar roles in Hollywood and Bollywood

PALLAB BHATTACHARYA, New Delhi

Veteran actress-activist Shabana Azmi is on a roll. She is just back from shooting in an American film dealing with a subject close to her heart. Secondly, her classical songs in a forthcoming Indian feature film in English have been appreciated by experts in the field, Anup Jalota and Alka Yagnik.

Azmi, one of the finest actresses produced by the parallel cinema, has acted in films directed by Satyajit Ray, Mrinal Sen, Shyam Benegal and Govind Nihalani. She now awaits the commercial release of Hollywood movie Waterborne, which also stars newcomer Perizad Zorabian who shot into fame with Joggers' Park, featuring versatile Victor Banerjee.

In Waterborne Azmi plays the role of a Sikh woman who runs a big convenience store in Los Angeles. When a water crisis breaks out, she finds an opportunity to make a fast buck by overpricing the bottled drinking water. Her son resents this move.

When a terrorist attack occurs in the US and hate-crime breaks out, the Sikh woman is injured, prompting her son to take revenge on her American girl friend, which is resisted by the mother.

Directed by debutante Ben Rekhi, an American of Indian origin, the film ends on a positive note sending out the message that racism and hate-crime of all kinds are bad.

What Azmi likes about Rekhi's film is that, unlike many Hollywood films, made by directors of Indian origin dealing with the identity crisis of the Diaspora in the US, Waterborne looks at a problem facing the mainstream American society.

Back home, Azmi cannot wait for the audience response to Morning Raga, directed by well-known playwright Mahesh Dattani. Not that the actress is singing for the first time in a film she has done it in two earlier movies, Saaz and Tehzeeb.

But singing in Morning Raga was special for her as she underwent training in Carnatic music for a month to essay the role.

Morning Raga is the story of classical singer Swarnalata who gives up singing for 20 years after being petrified by the death of her son in an accident. When a lively Pinkie (played by Perizad Zorabian) and her fiancé Abhinay (played by Prakash Rao) come in touch with her, Swarnalata agrees to teach Carnatic music to Pinkie but refuses to perform in public function.

Azmi is happy that scripts of films are still being written with lead roles for actresses of her age.

A rare passion for Nazrul and Rabindranath

HARUN UR RASHID

PRACTISING Rabindra Sangeet and Nazrul Sangeet simultaneously is a rarity among artists. Badrunnesa Dalia's specialty as a singer is that she has wrought this feat. Although she prefers her Nazrul Sangeet identity, she professes an equal passion for Rabindra Sangeet.

Dalia was born in a culturally weathered family: her father was not a recognised singer but he could sing well enough to inspire interest for the art in his daughter. Dalia's elder brother is the famous cartoonist Asifur Huda; her younger brother Suman Rahat is also a singer. Dalia took lessons in classical music from Ustad Mofizul Islam and Abinash Goswami. Later, she learnt Nazrul Sangeet from renowned Sudhin Das and Sohrab Hossain.

How did she come to identify herself as a Nazrul Sangeet artiste? Apparently Sohrab Hossain played an important role in this. 'Once in the music class, my teacher Sohrab Hossain put me through a test in Rabindra Sangeet and Nazrul Sangeet. I sang songs from both the genres. After the test he told me to choose Nazrul Sangeet,' says Dalia.

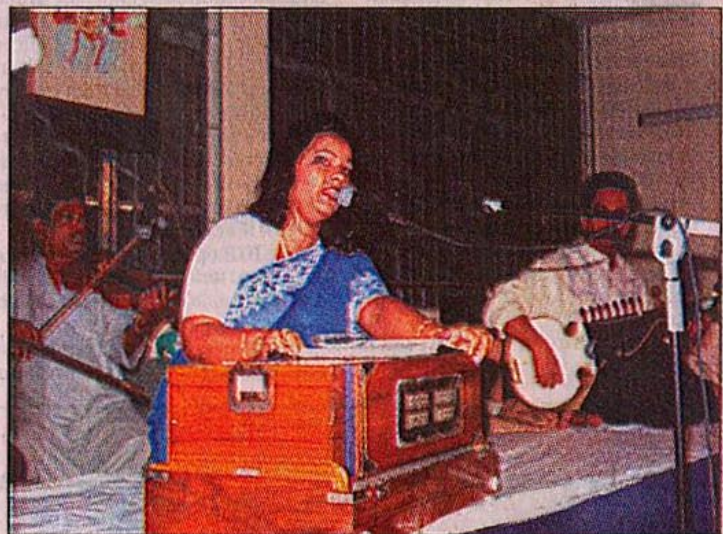

However, she is comfortable with both genres. As a child artiste she won the national award twice in Nazrul Sangeet in 1983 and Rabindra Sangeet in 1984. 'Rabindra Sangeet is based on mir demanding more concentration on pronunciation whereas Nazrul Sangeet demands perfection of the tune. And I believe I am honest in maintaining both,' says Dalia.

But doesn't it create problems while performing Nazrul and Rabindra songs successively? 'After a session of one kind of songs, I have to take a short break for concentrating on the next kind. It hasn't given me much trouble so far. Actually, I have become used to it since my childhood.'

It is unfortunate that an artiste of Dalia's talent has not yet brought out any albums. Explaining the feature neither Nazrul Sangeet nor Rabindra Sangeet, but modern songs. Dalia is a little embarrassed about this and says, 'Artists are rather helpless to the wills of the production houses. There is a notion among them that Nazrul or Rabindra songs don't run better than modern songs. So to enter the music world, one has to contend with the "business interest" of the production reasoning behind this, she says her husband's government job necessitated field postings at different places. 'Staying out of Dhaka, one cannot have any achievement in this regard,' says Dalia. 'Now that I am back, I am working on my debut album,' she adds.

Dalia rendering songs at a programme

However, Dalia's first album will houses.' But Dalia is determined that her next albums will be for the lovers of Nazrul and Rabindra songs.

Dalia is an enlisted artiste of Bangladesh Television since 1988 and the Betar since 1996. She also performs at programmes organised by Bangla Academy, Shilpakala Academy, Nazrul Institute and Nazrul Academy.

Rituparno Ghosh retrospective

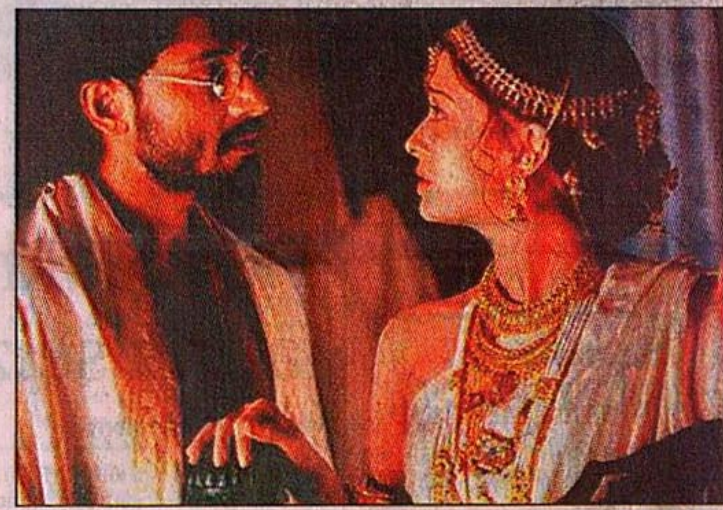

CULTURAL CORRESPONDENT

Bangladesh Federation of Film Societies (BFFS) screens Chokher Bali, Shuvo Mohurat and Utsab today at Bishwa Sahitya Kendro.

Rituparno Ghosh came into filmmaking in 1992 with his experience in advertising. He has been the editor of the glossy Bangla film magazine Anandalok for quite some time. His first film Hirer Angti was made for children. His other films are: Unishe April (1994), Dahan (1997), Bariwali (1999), Asookh (1999), Utsab (2000), Tuti (2002), Chokher Bali (2003), Shuvo Mohurat (2003) and Raincoat (2004).

Rituparno Ghosh

A scene from Chokher Bali

His films have won quite a few national awards, but internationally they were not well-received, though they were shown in many international film festivals. His films have a popular appeal, and usually are commercially successful.

Three of Rituparno Ghosh's recent films are being shown in this retrospective. The screening schedule is: Shuvo Mohurat at 10:00am, Chokher Bali at 12:30pm, Utsab at 3:00pm and Chokher Bali at 6:30pm.

Chokher Bali is an adaptation of Rabindranath Tagore's famous eponymous novel set in the British Bengal in the early 1900s which focuses on the British colonisation and the domestic situation of a Kolkata household. 'It is the psychological study of relationships between the sexes in a landed family, of shifting eternal triangles, complex motivations and a subtle play of emotions'. The film stars Aishwarya Rai in the pivotal role of Binodini, a young widow, who changes everyone who ever comes into her contact.
