ACC staff selection gets delayed over legal tangle

JULFIKAR ALI MANIK

Unfinished legal formalities are delaying staff selection for the Anti-Corruption Commission (ACC).

At the end of the last week, it was found that the two committees formed to screen employees of the now-defunct Bureau of Anti-Corruption (Bac) are not legally mandated to select staff members for the ACC, sources said.

The ACC had hurriedly formed the committees without looking into the legal aspects, the sources added.

The committees were to submit reports to the commission by December 12, but they failed to do so because of the legal barriers.

Appointed earlier this month, the committees are looking into the profiles and career records of 1,106 Bac staff to select honest and efficient ones for the ACC. One committee deals with the first class officials and the other rest of the staff.

Referring to the Anti-Corruption Commission Act, an official said the ACC will have to formulate a rule under which these committees will screen the Bac employees. The rule will need the president's approval for enforcement.

As the ACC had not formulated such rules before appointing the committees, some officials questioned the legality of what the

Modern voting system not before 2007

SHAKHAWAT LITON

A modern voting system to curb poll fraud will not be in place before the next general election scheduled for early 2007, as the Election Commission (EC) has been unable to move ahead the necessary reforms, sources said.

The election commissioners are still in talks on introducing a modern Electronic Voting System (EVS) and voter ID cards. They are not optimistic, however, that the new measures will be in place by the next national polls.

The EC had decided a year ago to introduce EVS and was to hold meetings with major political parties to seek their opinions on the issue. But the decision has remained confined to paper.

Officials at the EC secretariat said many countries are adopting modern voting systems. Even India this year successfully held its general elections by using electronic voting machines, a move appreciated the world over.
