'Reform labour laws to ensure women workers' rights'

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Speakers at a rally yesterday urged the government to reform existing labour laws to ensure the rights of women workers.

They said the reform is needed to protect the industries and maintain uninterrupted production in mills and factories.

The regional rally was organised by Karmojibi Nari (KN), an initiative for working women, at Uttara in the city.

Speaking as chief guest, KN President Shirin Akhtar called for introducing a social security programme to ensure alternative employment opportunities for women workers.

She also called for 20 percent maternity allowance, uniform wages for male and female workers, special laws to stop sexual harassment of women at their workplaces, and formation of national disaster management fund.

Shirin urged the government to ensure a fair working environment by ensuring minimum wages and introducing provident fund and gratuity for retrenched workers.

Chaired by Uttara Field Organiser Syeda Selina Shely, the rally was also addressed by Project Director Alok Sarkar and Uttarkhan Union Parishad Chairman Kamaluddin.

The National Front of Teachers and Employees stages a demonstration in the city yesterday to press for its eight-point demand.
