A group of ranking European Union diplomats completed a two-day visit to China Thursday, urging their host to act as soon as possible to curb soaring textile exports.

EU External Affairs Commissioner Benita Ferrero-Waldner welcomed a pledge by Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao to rein in exports but said China would have to follow up on the promise

Along similar lines, EU Trade Commissioner Peter Mandelson earlier Thursday called on China to act quickly to rein in its booming textile exports to Europe.

The European Commission launched an investigation into select textile and garment categories from China last month after compiling evidence that exports rose by as much as 534 percent after a 31-year-old global quota system ended in January.

Mandelson is facing strong pressure from EU textile producers who are worried that thousands of jobs could be lost if urgent action is not taken to hold back the flood of Chinese clothing unleashed by the end of the quotas.

The dollar hit a three-month high versus the euro on Thursday and came close to 2005 highs, extending gains made on Wednesday's narrower US trade deficit figures and ahead of expected strong retail sales data later on Thursday.

The dollar also cleared a twoweek high against the ven, a onemonth high against the Swiss franc and a 6-1/2 week high against sterling following news on Wednesday the deficit had contracted to $54.99 billion in March, against expectations of a widening to a new record.

US retail sales at 1230 GMT are forecast to show a strong 0.7 percent rise in April after edging up 0.3 percent in March.

"Markets are simple-minded and after two recent strong releases -- job creation last Friday and the trade deficit yesterday -the dollar will work hard to break through the year's highs at $1.2730 (per euro)," said Armin Mekelburg, currency strategist at HypoVereinsbank in Munich.

The dollar hit its highest level against the euro since February 10 at $1.2741, close to 2005 highs around $1.2730. It was trading at $1.2768 at 0947 GMT, up a third of a percent from the US close.
