National Anthem The song of freedom

KARIM WAHEED

Amar Shonar Bangla Ami Tomae Bhalobashi Chirodin Tomar Akash Tomar Batash O Ma Amar Praney Bajae Bashi

NEEDLESS to say, every Bangalee knows the first 10 lines of this song by heart. For most of us, this is the first song we have to learn. Even those who are not too keen on music are able to render this song. No other patriotic song perhaps captures the essence of Bengal so effortlessly.

Through dire times this song has eased our journey as a nation. Who can forget Zahir Raihan's heartfelt depiction of the song in his movie Jibon Thekey Ney? Amar Shonar Bangla is hence rightfully our National Anthem.

The song was penned by Rabindranath Tagore in 1905, during the Nationalist movement against the British. To celebrate the centennial of composition and the first rendition of the song, The Liberation War Museum in Shegun Bagicha organised a cultural programme on May 19 at the Museum premises.

The programme was initiated by Asaduzzaman Noor, a trustee of the Liberation War Museum. Noor expressed his gratitude at the audience's turnout and interest.

Renowned Tagore exponent and specialist Sanjida Khatun took the podium next. She focused on the social and cultural background of the song. Sanjida said, "During their rule, the British deliberately tried to create a division between Hindus and Muslims. Later on, they even divided Bengal into two factions, West and East Bengal. This phenomenon is popularly known as Banga-Bhongo. Tagore, like many of his contemporaries, could not support the notion of dividing Bengal."

Coincidentally, this was also the time when the Nationalist Movement in the subcontinent was gaining momentum. So, when Tagore composed Amar Shonar Bangla in 1905, it became a source of inspiration for the Bangalees.

"During our Liberation War, this particular song boosted patriotism among our masses, the freedom fighters and anyone who had dreamed of an independent Bangladesh. Thus, the leader of the then newborn Bangladesh, Sheikh Mujib declared, "The song that has been an inseparable part of our struggle for freedom, deserves to be our National Anthem." The song still unites all Bangalees and will continue to do so eternally," said Sanjida.

Eminent artiste and music teacher Dr Mridulkanti Chakravarti focused on the source and significance of the song. He amplified, "During his stay at Shilaidaha, Tagore was deeply influenced by Baul songs. He came across Gagan Horkora, a disciple of Lalon.

Gagan's spiritual song Ami Kothae Pabo Tarey made a profound impact on the poet and he composed Amar Shonar Bangla in 1905, based on the tune. The song was rendered at a cultural event on August 7, 1905.

"Throughout the ages, the song had figuratively become a weapon against any oppressor Bangalees faced." Chakravarti rendered the song, Ami Kothae Pabo Tarey, Amar Mon-er Manush Je Rey. Noted artistes Laisa Ahmed Lisa, Tania Mannan and Elora Ahmed Shukla also performed at the event.

The event ended on a positive note that Bangalees would strive relentlessly to uphold national values and Amar Shonar Bangla will always aid us through our journey.

Tribute In remembrance of Abdul Latif

NOVERA DEEPTA

Bangladesh Loko Sangeet Porishad organised a commemorative meeting for language activist and venerable musician Abdul Latif at the auditorium of Kachi Kanchar Ashore on May 19.

Eminent cultural personalities Shudhin Das, Mustafa Zaman Abbasi, Asadul Haque, Nashid Kamal, Indra Mohan Rajbongshi, Ashraf Siddiqui and others paid their tribute to the dedicated patriotic singer Latif.

After the welcome speech of Nasreen Ferdous, the general secretary of the organisation, Shamsul Arefin Arif recounted some of his cherished memories about his father Latif. Arif urged Bangladeshis to cooperate in the preservation of Latif's songs by publishing books and producing records.

Veteran cultural personality Mustafa Zaman Abbasi briefly presented the immense contribution of the artiste to the music of Bangladesh. Abbasi said, "Abdul Latif dedicated his entire life to uphold the Bangla culture to the people of the world. The spirit of his songs is incomparable. The boldness and the urge for independence have been portrayed in his songs vividly which inspired the whole nation to fight for their rights. The people of Bangladesh must pay their due respect to this incomparable musician."

Recalling some childhood memories about the artiste, popular Nazrul singer Nashid Kamal said, "Abdul Latif had the unique endowment to rapidly write appropriate songs on any occasion." Veteran Nazrul exponent Sudhin Das shared some amusing and touching memories of Latif. He went on to add that "Despite his tremendous contribution to composing incomparable music, Latif never craved for publicity."

In the second session of the programme, the artistes of Bangladesh Loko Sangeet Porishad rendered some of the songs written and composed by Abdul Latif including Porer jaga porer jami, Dol dol duluni, Shona shona shona and Ora amar mukher katha. Artistes also presented several dance pieces with Latif's songs.

Television show on adolescent reproductive health

A scene from the awareness based magazine programme Amra Shobai Jante Chai

A gala premiere of the new 26-episode educational TV magazine programme Amra Shobai Jante Chai under the Adolescent Reproductive Health (ARH) communication package Know Yourself was held on May 19 at the Spectra Convention Centre. The programme was organised by Bangladesh Centre for Communication Programmes (BCCP) with support from the ARH Working Group.

Amra Shobai Jante Chai, a programme for adolescents, is to be aired on BTV every week at 7:30pm beginning from the last week of May, says a press release.

The magazine show consists of stories and question/answer sessions on juvenile issues, special guest appearances and quizzes with the full involvement of adolescents. The aim is to generate awareness among adolescents about their reproductive health and rights, enable them to develop life skill to think critically, give up risky and harmful practices, exercise positive health behavior and shape a risk-free future.

Creators plan sequel for dark Sin City

REUTERS, Cannes

Not everyone is enamoured with Robert Rodriguez's ultra-violent movie Sin City, based on the dark comics of Frank Miller, but the creators are working on a sequel and the cast of stars is keen to carry on.

The film, which has earned more than $72 million at the U.S. box office alone, is in Cannes as part of the main competition, raising eyebrows among veteran festival-watchers who are used to more artistic, less commercial fare.

There have also been grumbings about the relentless and graphic violence as well as accusations of sexism in a film where the women are generally scantily clad.

But none of that bothers Rodriguez and co-director Miller, who created the original comic strips that have been faithfully reproduced on screen by using advanced digital technology.

"We've been talking about it [the sequel] since day one," Rodriguez told Reuters on Thursday.

The next film will be based on Miller's Dame to Kill For, a part of the Sin City plot that was not included in the original movie, and Rodriguez wants to keep his cast if he can.

Mickey Rourke plays Marv, a hulking, tough-as-nails fighter out to avenge the murder of a blonde beauty he failed to protect from Elijah Wood's evil, flesh-eating character Kevin.

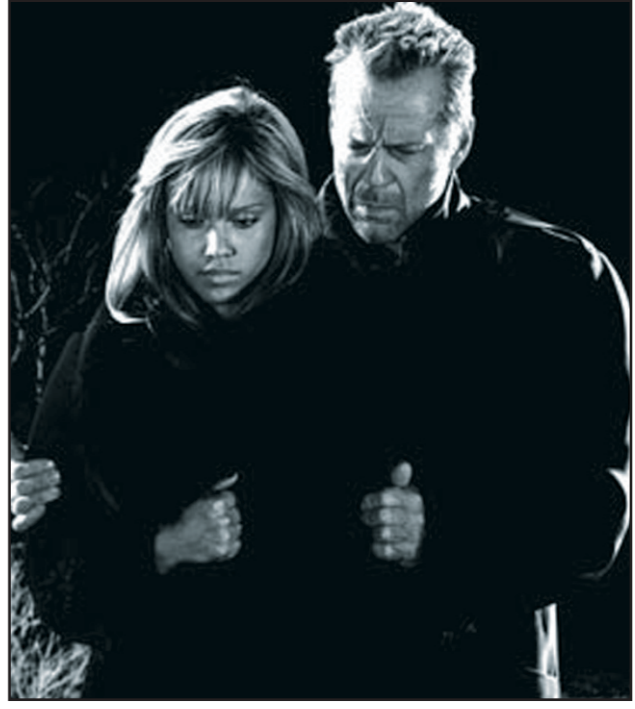

Bruce Willis plays John Hartigan, the last good cop in town, Clive Owen is hard-nosed Dwight, Benicio Del Toro takes on the role of good-cop-turned-bad Jackie Boy, and Jessica Alba plays Nancy, a 19-year-old exotic dancer who loves Hartigan.

"We'd always thought Dame to Kill For was the story [for the sequel]," Rodriguez said. "It has all the characters...so it would be great to bring everybody back."

During a news conference on Wednesday, the American director said work could begin later this year.

Is Cannes the Place for Sin? While its star cast has been a welcome sight at this year's Cannes Film Festival, which has been light on acting royalty until now, the appearance of Sin City in the main competition came as a surprise.

The directors and actors defended its portrayal of violence, which has been a popular theme among the 21 contenders for the coveted Palme d'Or prize awarded on Saturday.

Jessica Alba and Bruce Willis in Dimension Films' Sin City

Rodriguez took considerable risks with Sin City, spending his own money to prepare images he used to convince a reluctant Miller to back his project, and resigning from the Directors Guild of America which said only one director could be credited.

When Miller saw Rodriguez's concept, staying true to the grim black-and-white world but adding rare splashes of color for effect, he was finally convinced.
