Welcome to Istanbul

CHAMPS LEAGUE

It was a part of the magnificent Greek civilization; the Greeks called it Byzantium. Later, in 330 AD, Roman emperor Constantine named this place Constantinople and made it the capital of the Eastern Roman Empire.

Rome soon fell, but the eastern capital flourished for centuries. The magnificent Hagia Sophia (built in the 6th century; now a museum) still constantly reminds the people of the city's halcyon days. Crusaders in the early 13th century captured and ravaged the city; the Greeks vainly tried to take control after the World war I. Although the capital of Turkey was shifted to Ankara in 1923, Constantinople, named Istanbul in 1930 is still the heart of modern Turkey. Standing at a point where Europe meets Asia, it is a splendid blend of two different cultures. Another page to the history of Istanbul will be added on May 25th, as the city hosts the Champions League final between AC Milan and Liverpool FC.

And as if to keep up with the city's tradition of both glory and gloom the finalists have seen the highs and lows. Milan have won the European Cup six times. They won back-toback Cups in 1989 and 1990. The nineties were a golden era with four Scudettos and the European Cup in quarterfinals

With 18 League titles and six F.A. Cups, Liverpool are a big force in English football. They became a major power in the sixties, under the guidance of Bill Shankly. But it was under his successor, Bob Paisley, that they became a superpower.

Three of Liverpool's four European titles came under his management (in 1977,78, and 81). Their last success was back in 1984. But it was in Europe that the first major tragedy involving the club's fans took place. The club lost the 1985 European Cup final to Juventus at Heysel, Belgium. Yet, the football on that night was overshadowed by the death of 39 people, mostly Italian supporters before the game as a result of violence between rival fans. Milan were comfortable winners of Group F with 13 points from six games. In the next stage they ended Manchester United's challenge. The quarterfinal featured a mouthwatering tie between the Milan giants. Milan won the first leg against Inter 2-0. The second leg had to be abandoned with 19 minutes to go because of crowd trouble. The biggest scare came in the second leg of the semifinal, against Dutch side PSV Eindhoven Milan were leading 2-0 from the first tie. But PSV won 3-1 at home and Milan only went through on the away goals rule.

Spaniard to referee Cup final

AFP, Istanbul

Spain's Manuel Enrique Gonzalez will take charge of the Liverpool v AC Milan European Champions League final here on Wednesday, UEFAannounced.

The 40-year-old Gonzalez has been a referee in the Spanish top flight since 1995 and in international games since 1999

Earlier in the tournament he was the referee for Liverpool's 3-1 win over Olympiakos at the group stage and for AC Milan's 1-0 win over Manchester United at Old Trafford in the last 16.

UEFA also announced that Liverpool would play in their traditional red shirts with AC Milan in white instead of their usual red and black vertical stripes.

The Italians had the choice of which shirts to wear and opted for the white outfit which they wore the last four times they won the trophy in 1989, 1990, 1994 and 2003.

Liverpool wore red each time they won the European Cup in 1977, 1978, 1981 and 1984.
