

City in monsoons

D WELLERS burnt by the scorching heat of summer were eagerly waiting for the rainy season. But now that the monsoons have set in, they see a different picture. On city streets, commuters and vehicles suffer because of water logging which is commonplace year after year. Mass road digging has rubbed salt to their injuries. Dhaka City Corporation earlier set a deadline to complete the work by end May, but now turns a blind eye to the continuous digging by utility service providing agencies.
