Dhaka Padatik presents Katha 71 Ambiance of places old

ERSHAD KAMOL

RONICALLY, some of the offspring of the freedom fighters are alienated from the spirit of the Liberation War. Dhaka Padatik's latest production Katha 71 by Kumar Protishi Bal depicts this harsh reality. Dhaka Padatik staged the premiere show of Katha 71 at the Experimental Theatre Stage on July 16.

Most of the current plays on the Liberation War present a fragmented story of that time and they show the anguish and wrath of the freedom fighters in the post-Liberation country. However, Katha 71 departs from its ilk as it presents direct events of the Liberation War.

The play starts with a procession sequence in post-Liberation Bangladesh, where prominent figures of the society deliver speeches against the Pakistani collaborators. One such character realises that his son is influenced by western lifestyle. Subsequently, the spirit of the Liberation War comes alive through a debate between the father and son. Through their dialogue the victims of the War appear on stage in flashback scenes.

Katha 71 portrays the events of Dhaka in 1971. The play shows the freedom struggle from the vantage of "Operation Search Light", the master plan of Pakistani Army to abolish the Bangalees from the face of earth on the eve of March 25. Bal, in his play has depicted the fractional stories of genocide by the Pakistani Army and their collaborators.

Katha 71 ends optimistically by awakening the younger generation to the reality and spirit of the War

Director Debashish Ghosh has utilised the stage as well as the balcony of the theatre hall. All the indoor sequences are created at different corners of the balcony while the outdoor aspects are created on the empty stage. His choreography in portraying the war scenes deserves plaudits. Throughout the play Debashish has composed more than one sequence to create the realistic ambience of war. However, sometimes it was difficult for the audience to keep track of all the events. Moreover, the light design needs to be improved.

Katha 71 is a teamwork-based production And the artistes deserve kudos for their remarkable performance

The Bharatiya Janata Party and its cudgels against Bollywood star Salman Khan.

On Thursday last, newspapers published transcripts of telephone conversations purportedly between Salman and another Bollywood star Aishwarva Rai, in which Salman tries to bully her into performing for an event organised by Abu Salem and threatens her with his underworld connections.

The screening of Salman's latest film Maine Pyaar Kyun Kiya, which was released on July 15, was withheld in several cities in Madhya Pradesh. The first show of the movie was deferred in Indore, Jabalpur and Gwalior after protests and demonstrations by Bajrang Dal cadres. No loss or damage to theatres was reported.

"Places, spaces" was a recent exhibition at the Goethe Institut by Kashef Chowdhury. This was the outcome of the photography that Kashef has done in Europe over 25 days, in nine cities. The photographs were not in a sequence and were not theme-based. They were just a record of the places that had made an impression on him.

One could begin the exhibit by the photo of the sea in Venice, looking through the window. There was the drama of the buildings seen on top of the water and the gondolas. Then you saw London's St Paul's through the Millennium Bridge and was a mix of the old and new. "This brought in a facet of the state of our civilisation. Kashef said. "Next were some spaces in the Tate Gallery, which appeared like the inside of a cathedral. Then we saw the statue of Kaiser Wilhem in Cologne. It's like a shadow in history", Kashef commented. "Later we saw a memorial in Berlin along with a fountain. Then we had the image of a delightful small hotel window looking on to a train station.

"We then came across a second photograph of Venice in which one witnessed the care that the Madonna received in that place as her picture was adorned with a surfeit of flowers. Next we saw the main piazza in Vicenza, an important city in terms of architecture where you found a lot of work by Palladio. We went on to see a statue in the garden near a building by Palladio.

What made Kashef go to these cities? "I was invited to attend a congress on world cities in Berlin. We also went to Hamburg and Cologne. I travelled on to Munich, Verona, Vicenza and Venice and London on the way back. I also went to Aachen. I stayed in each place for about two to three days. My intention was to get a feel of the places and not a record," he said. Asked which cities he liked the best Kashef said, "I liked the older parts of the cities. The Italian cities left an indelible mark on my mind. This was a lot to do outdoors in the city spaces. There were also the museums and art galleries in each city. You could be doing nothing and yet enjoying yourself.

raphy for the last 15 years. As an architect he was drawn to photography and did a course in it. In his words, "I consider myself a professional photographer although I don't earn from this source. I enjoy photographing landscapes but what I tried to capture this time were feelings. Earlier, when I used to travel through cities, I used to look at architecture and take a lot of photographs on it. This time I tried to look at what made the city. "Next month I hope to have another exhibition at the Drik Gallery called 'Impressions 05-05.' That too will not be travel photography. It will be very personal in nature.

Magazine shows are a highly popular concept in Bangladeshi visual media. And satellite channel ATN Bangla is all set to telecast its brand new magazine show Protikriti for its viewers. The show is made under the banner of Mrittika Production. The young director of the show Rana Hossain says, "It's certainly not a run of the mill production.'

So what are these exceptional ideas? Rana explains, 'For instance we will show interviews of singers along with their songs, latest beauty and fashion tips, mouthwatering cookery section, latest filmi flicks and songs, medical advice and lot more. Not only that, the viewers will get acquainted with the burning issues and problems and the current affairs of the country from its reporting section."

owners and distributors voluntarily withdrew the screening of the film.

Though most tickets were booked in advance, the crowd turnout at the theatres was bleak as activists shouted slogans, tore posters and burnt effigies of the actor in front of the cinema halls
